The Vanderbilt Cup Race.

FINANCIAL PANIC IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Charter of the Bank of England Suspended.

Unlimited Issue of Bills Authorized.

EXTENSIVE FAILURES AND SUSPENSIONS.

Immense Decline in Cotton.

STEADINESS IN CONSOLS.

St. John, N. B., Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The steamship Vanderbilt came out at South-ampton on Saturday, the 14th instant, and arrived off Cape Race at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon, the 23d instant, where she was boarded by the News Yacht of the New-York Associated Press, and her news was delivered to the Agent here on Monday morning; but unfortunately the recent heavy storm in Cape Breton, N. S., laid down telegraph wires at several points between Cape Race and Portland, in the vicinity of Canso, and it was found impossible to open the line between that place and Portland, N. S., Office, it was found the line between that place and Portland, Me., was also broken, and we finally succeeded in receiving New-York old St. John and Fredericton, N. B., and Quebec and Montreal, Canada, and thence old Portland and Boston over the lines of the American Telegraph Company.

The following is the summary of news prepared at Liverpool and Southampton, by the correspondents of the Associated Press.—the Liverpool advices coming down to Friday, 13th instant, and from London to Saturday morning, 14th instant.

The despondent condition of monetary matters on the departure of the steamship Atlantic, on the afternoon of the 11th inst., resulted on the following day in a fearful panic throughout the whole country. All the Banks utterly refused to discount to their patrons, which naturally added to the wild excitement, until the afternoon of Thursday, when a Treasury letter appeared in London, and was instantly transmitted by telegraph to all the chief cities and towns, suspending the Bank Charter Act, and authorizing the issue of notes to any amount on approved securities. The effect at every point was instantaneous, and the panic ceased as if by magic. At Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, and other important cities, the news was received with the most extravagant demonstrations of joy.

The suspension of the City Bank of Glasgow, on the day the Africa sailed, is confirmed. The following are the failures, etc.:

[illegible] & Co., London.

Watson, Morgan & Co., stationers, London.

Fenn & Sons, London.

Cammell & Co., iron merchants, Liverpool.

Mackenzie, Ramsay & Co., Dundee.

Dixon, Pease & Co., London.

Fairbairn, Gaskell & Co., Liverpool.

Bell, Brander & Co., London.

Murray, Grant & Co., Swansea.

Summan & Co., Nottingham.

The London Money Market was steadier on Friday the 13th inst., and Bank Stock sold at 209¾ to 212. Bills were firm and the feeling in business circles in all the principal cities and towns in the country improved, in consequence of the suspension of the Bank Charter Act.

The Bank of France had raised its rate of discount on 90 days bills to 10 per cent.

Consols had fluctuated considerably, but closed with increased steadiness on Friday at 90⅝@90¾ for money.

The details of the news from India by the last mail add few facts of special importance. The latest report from Delhi states that the loss of the British at that place in killed and wounded was inside of twelve hundred, including 64 officers.

Greene had brought the mutineers of the Gwalior Contingent under his control, by arranging against them his own troops and ten thousand Thakoors, and by cutting off their supplies.

It was reported that Lucknow, which was relieved on the 25th of September, was again besieged by Nana Sahib, with 50,000 rebels. All the city people found in Delhi were bayoneted by the British troops. Many Europeans were found in the city, fighting in the ranks of the rebels.

The English ship Pacific, bound to Australia, had been wrecked off Sydney, and one hundred and forty passengers and all the crew lost.

Parliament was to assemble immediately.

The greatest anxiety was felt in England to have the news by the Vanderbilt reach New-York in advance of the publicity of the advices by the Atlantic.

The steamer North Star, from New-York, arrived out on the 13th inst.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Liverpool Cotton Market.

The sales of Cotton for the week amounted to 31,000 bales, of which 1,600 were taken on speculation, and 300 for export. There was a general panic in the market, and prices declined 1d.@1½d., holders pressing sales. On Friday, however, a recovery of ½d. took place, the market closing with an advancing tendency, and the sales adding up 8,000 bales. Quotations are nominal and irregular.

Fair Orleans	7¾	Middling Uplands	7 1-16
Middling Orleans	7½	Middling Mobiles	7⅜
Fair Uplands	7¼

The stock was 725,000 bales, of which 162,000 were American.

State of Trade in Manchester.

The advices from Manchester were unfavorable and the sales unimportant.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market.

Breadstuffs had slightly declined. Flour closed dull at a decline of 6d.@1s. since Tuesday. Wheat closed dull with a decline in the middling and lower grades of 1½d.@2d. Corn was quiet and all qualities nearly declined. Western Canal Flour, [illegible] Philadelphia and Baltimore, 27s.@28s.; Ohio, 28s.; Red Wheat, 8s. 2d.@8s. 6d.; White Corn, [illegible]

Liverpool Provision Market.

Pork dull and slightly declined. Bacon quiet, and prices weak. Lard heavy, and somewhat lower. Tallow—A slight decline in prices.

Liverpool Produce Market.

Pot and Pearl Ashes dull. Sugar, no sales of consequence, but prices steady. Coffee—Sales unimportant. Rice—Little inquiry and prices weak. Spirits Turpentine 28s.@28s. 6d.

London Markets.

Sugar—The market is firmer, and holders demand an advance of 1s.@1s. 6d. over the rates current on the 9th.

Coffee is also in better demand, and prices are rather higher.

Rice is dull, and prices nearly nominal.

Tobacco is steady, at previous rates.

Tea—The market is dull, at a decline of 2s.@2s. on Souchong and Congou.

THE MAYORALTY.

Immense Demonstration of the People.

NO DISTINCTION OF PARTY.

DANIEL F. TIEMANN INDORSED.

Why Wood Should Not be Elected.

Speeches of Ex-Mayor Havemeyer, Hon. John McKeon, Hon. Daniel E. Sickles, Ex-Senator Brooks, Wm. H. Fry, Ex-Judge Whiting, and Others.

LETTERS FROM HON. MARTIN VAN BUREN AND OTHERS.

Resolutions, &c.

The Academy of Music was crowded last night, in obedience to the following call:

The People in Council.—The citizens of New-York in favor of an honest and economical administration of our Municipal Government, and in favor of elevating Daniel F. Tiemann to the Mayoralty, will assemble at the Academy of Music on Tuesday, Nov. 24, at 7½ P. M. A number of eminent speakers will be present and address the meeting.

By order of the People's Executive Committee,
JAMES E. COOLEY, Chairman.

Wm. Henry Appleton, Daniel Bowlby, David Wadsvary, } Secretaries.

Long before the hour appointed for the organization of the meeting, the building was filled in every part. It was not filled merely, it was crammed and jammed to its utmost extent. The corridors, though commanding no view of the interior, were thronged with persons who had some distant hope of squeezing in before the meeting ended. The lobbies were filled; and in the street, at the principal entrance, at the stage door, and about the stoops of adjacent houses in Irving-place, listening to speeches from outside orators, were probably some four thousand persons, who could not enter the building. Within the building there were at the least calculation, from seven to eight thousand persons. Every inch of space was literally occupied. Never, since the Academy has been erected—not during the warmest era of the Fremont campaign, was it so thronged and overthronged with an audience as it was last night.

Over the front of the stage a large banner was displayed, with this inscription:

"The People's Candidate for Mayor, Daniel F. Tiemann, the Champion of City Rights and the Working Man's Friend."

After Rodewald's Band had kept the impatient audience in good humor for nearly half an hour, James B. Cooley, Esq., called to the Chair Peter Cooper, Esq., Freeman Pease, Esq., and the rest of the Committee, took their seats amidst overwhelming applause.

Mr. Cooley, in a few words, addressed the assemblage:

Fellow-citizens, he said, the hour having arrived for which this meeting was called, I have the honor to nominate as its presiding officer, William F. Havemeyer. (Loud and continued cheers.)

Mr. Havemeyer then advanced to the front of the stage and spoke as follows:

Fellow-Citizens: I thank you for the honor you have conferred on me in inviting me to preside over your deliberations on this interesting and important occasion. I say important occasion, for I see around me men of all parties and all classes, who could not be invited upon a common platform, except in a great crisis of our affairs, and for the public good. (Cheers.) Whatever right I may feel to decline the distinctions of public office, I feel no right to decline the duties of a good citizen. (Loud cheers.) First among these duties is that of rescuing the City Government from the iron grasp of its hands. (Cheers.) In the absorbing activity of private business our citizens have for a long time left the management of municipal affairs too much to interested persons, to those who fatten upon the public expenditure. (Cries of "That's so.") Improvidence, prodigality and jobbing have become the order of the day, and are enhancing the burdens of debt and taxation, until they threaten the confiscation of all property and the confiscation of all the fruits of labor. (Cheers.) This fatal blight is beginning to fall on all classes of our citizens. It strikes not merely the capitalist, the merchant, the master mechanic, who have accumulated some property, but it invades the little hoard of every working man and woman laid by in a savings institution. It consumes the daily earnings of the industrious poor. (Cheers.) The City taxes are, in name, laid mainly on real estate, but, in fact, they fall not, according to the popular fallacy, upon those who carry the taxes to the Collector's office, but upon those who use the thing taxed. (Cries of "That's so.") The mechanic, the laborer, pays taxes in the rent of the building which shelters him; he pays taxes in the price of every garment that clothes his family; he pays taxes in the price of every mouthful of food they eat. Every laboring man pays, in these indirect forms, for taxation, at least one day's work out of every twelve—perhaps one out of every six. With this conviction I denounce, as all classes of our citizens should denounce, every act of prodigality or jobbing by the City Government as a robbery of labor. (Cheers.) It lessens the means of subsistence of every laboring man in the community, and tends to deteriorate the shelter, the clothing and food which he can furnish for his family. (Cheers.) At the present time, when the pressure of taxation is more heavily felt, and when every proper means should be employed to alleviate the general distress, shall we omit to reform the abuses of the City Government which are leading to such alarming results? (Cries of "No.") Let us then begin at the head. Let us place in the Mayoralty a citizen above reproach and above suspicion. (Three cheers for Tiemann.) Let us choose as our representative a man whom we know will be on the side of the people, and against all who seek to plunder them, a man who will not betray any interests and his own duty to fatten friends and relatives. (Loud cheers.) Such a man is Daniel F. Tiemann. You have the power to elect him. Will you do it? (Cries of "Yes," "Yes," and cheers for Tiemann.) Let us go forward and do our duty, and the City will be redeemed.

Mr. Wm. H. Appleton then read the following list of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries:

Mr. Dixon then read to the meeting the following resolutions:

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, Fernando Wood in his speech last night at the St. Nicholas Hotel generously relieved the citizens of New-York from all party obligations to rally to his support, by declaring emphatically that he regarded the present contest "As a personal one, and accepted it as such;" therefore,

Resolved, That as this is the only act of his public career for which we can be thankful, we hereby tender to him our grateful acknowledgments for reducing the issue to a personal contest between himself and the people, and in behalf of the latter, we hereby declare the reasons why we are opposed to his continuance in office, and assure him that these reasons are purely personal, and will not apply to any other candidate whom the Democracy of New-York may hereafter see fit to nominate.

We are opposed to Fernando Wood

Because, prior to his elevation to the Mayoralty, the transactions of his private business were matters of judicial record, and were not such as to inspire confidence in the faithful execution of the high and responsible trusts confided to the chief magistrate of this City.

Because, in the discharge of his duties, he has not been guided by any fixed principles, but by appealing alternately to the prejudices of the rich and the poor, has sought to array against each other classes whose welfare is indissolubly united by the fundamental laws of social existence.

Because he has undertaken to usurp the province of the Judiciary, and to construe the laws for himself, reducing a well-disposed and law-abiding community to the dangers of impending anarchy and bloodshed, in order to gratify his own lust for power.

Because he has repeatedly declared that where the law stands in his way, or no legal provision exists suited to his views, he was willing to assume doubtful powers, thus usurping the Legislative functions, and destroying that respect for the laws which is essential to the safety and prosperity of a peaceful community.

Because, when the Legislative and Judicial functions are thus superadded to Executive power, the servant and officer of the people becomes virtually their master and a despot, for which there is no remedy but the spontaneous uprising of the people, and the destruction of all party machinery, as no longer subserving the ends for which it is designed.

Because he has permitted or connived at jobs and the extravagant expenditure of the public money, thus bringing our Republican Government into contempt, and increasing the burdens of taxation upon all classes, and especially the poor, who feel the injury in the higher rents and prices for the necessaries of life.

Because in a time of universal distress, affecting all classes alike, instead of meeting the difficulty in accordance with well-settled principles, established by the experience of ages, he proposed to the Common Council a policy he knew at the time was impracticable, and which would, if carried out, destroy the value of property, and unsettle the foundations of society—substituting the creed of the highwayman and the code of the savage, for that law of love which has never failed to work out a cure for public evils, by affording employment to those who are unwilling to become paupers, when they can get work.

Because under his administration, it is notorious that the tone of public morals has degenerated; that the virtue of economy in the public expenditures has ceased to exist; that life is no longer safe in our midst, and that the great ends for which society and government are instituted are no longer secured. Therefore,

Resolved, That as his administration has not only been a total failure, but a disgrace to this City, and our free institutions, we protest in the face of the whole civilized world, that the Democracy of New-York, in the name of the honor and prosperity of the industrial interests of this great Metropolis, and that for the fair fame of our beloved City we will make a determined and united effort, without regard to party trammels, to hurl from power a man who has so recklessly and disastrously abused the great trusts confided to his keeping.

Resolved, That the struggle in which we are now engaged concerns the dearest interests of humanity, and that we appeal to every voter by all he holds sacred, to aid us in now achieving the deliverance for which we have waited so long and in vain.

Resolved, That in the People's candidate for Mayor, Daniel F. Tiemann, we behold the opposite of Fernando Wood both in public and private character, and that this simple statement is the highest eulogium we can pass upon his fitness for office, and the integrity of his character; that the remarkable concentration of all parties upon him are the means by which we can redeem this City from disgrace is conclusive evidence not only of the imminent peril in which it is placed, but also of the entire confidence of the public in our candidate.

Resolved, That we will all vote for him early in the day, and by personal attention at the polls on the day of election, make sure that the character of the City is redeemed, our property rescued from virtual confiscation; and our industrial classes no longer robbed of their hard earnings.

SPEECH OF HON. JOHN McKEON.

Mr. McKeon advanced amid tremendous cheers. When silence had been restored, he said:

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Citizens: After this magnificent spectacle to-night, who can doubt the success of the cause in which we are all engaged? (Cheers and cries of "No one.") I come to commune with you, my fellow citizens, upon the present position of public affairs in the City of New-York. Remember the words I use: "The position of public affairs in the City of New-York." Whatever difference we may have had of political sentiment in relation to the General and State Government, we are here united for a revolution in political affairs as they stand at present in the City of New-York. (Cheers, cries of "Good," and an exclamation of "That sounds like Democracy." Some confusion ensued which was eventually repressed by cries of "Order, order," and "All right.") For the first time in the history of the City of New-York, we have a charter which is intended to separate all other interests from that of the City of New-York, and we intend, that at the December election an issue shall be made between good government and bad government. I am aware that the persons with whom we are at variance in relation to the position of affairs in this City assume that the struggle is one for municipal rights. I deny that issue. (Cries of "Good; that's right.") It is an issue for the preservation of the personal rights—for the protection of the property of every man in this City. (Loud cheers.) The question of Municipal rights was settled, so far as New-York City was concerned, by the election which has just passed. The Legislature at Albany can alone correct whatever wrongs have been committed upon the City of New-York, and we are now to determine whether we can properly weigh and judge of our own advantages at the present time, so that we may find out whether it is possible or not to redeem this City from the political thraldom in which it is bound. (Applause.) Let me ask you what is our situation? (A Voice—We have a parcel of thieves over us.) (Laughter.) On one side I have it said to me that we have a set of thieves to contend with. Let me assure you that I shall deal in no epithets to-night. I shall deal with facts, and leave you to find the epithets by which they should be characterized. (Cheers.) In the first place, what is the position of the City as regards debt? You have at the present time a permanent debt of $10,000,000. You have in addition to that the taxes of the City increased to upwards of $6,000,000, which must be paid by the hard-working men in this community. (Cheers, and cries of "That is good.") It is not to be said that the rich pay the taxes. Every tax comes out of labor. ("Hear, Hear," and cheers.) There is no concealing the fact that from the tax which is imposed by a tariff down to the tax which is imposed by the City of New-York, everything comes out of the hard labor of the man who toils from morning till night. (Loud cheers.) I wish my fellow citizens would look at this, for there is no escaping it, that labor must pay this $6,000,000 a year, and that $10,000,000 of permanent debt. But you will say to me that we can remedy it. How? You cannot remedy it, except by the change of your rulers. You will say, in addition to that, honest men of this community, that you have been but half told the story, when you have been told how much we are in debt. What did you get for it? I will tell you what you got. Nothing but dishonor, and, to sum it up in one word, life and property are seriously at risk during every hour of the day. (Cheers.) Your situation is one of dirty streets, with every Department of the Government mismanaged, and it is time, if you seek for any redress, that you should put your own shoulders to the wheel. It is in vain to call upon Hercules. Every man here has the power, and if he will only exert it, our redemption is at hand. (Loud cheers.) But, say the friends of the present Administration, the Chief Magistrate of this City is not responsible for it. (A voice—"That is not so.") I hold him responsible for the greater part of this wrong. (Several voices—"So do I." Cries of "Good.") And, as Mr. Kelly last night dared us to the issue, I will present him with the facts. (Loud cheers.) I am glad that I am speaking here in presence of one who has done himself and the City of New-York honor in the chief magistracy of this City. (Cheers.) He knows whether a man in that magistracy can stay the torrent of corruption—he can tell whether he can throw himself in the breach or not. He knows very well, as most of you do, that with a firm and honest man at the head of the Government, much of this corruption would not exist. (Cheers.) I understand that his Honor, the Mayor, will address some assembly, as I understand from his speech published to-day, some short time hence, and I would ask him to explain certain matters so that he may have a fair trial. (Cries of "Good.") I ask him to answer me one question, as to one single fact—Are the taxes of the present day greater under your Administration than they were the year before you went in? That is a simple question. I will state a fact, and ask him to contradict it, that in 1853, the taxes were over $3,000,000, and that the taxes for 1857 are now over $6,000,000. That is one fact which I ask him to explain. "Oh! but," says he, "I did not pass them. I had not the power to prevent the passage of those matters." How does it happen then that with all your political power and patronage you cannot control the action of the Common Council? They were in consonance with you in political sentiment during the greater part of the time; and your influence then was not worth a straw; for with all the power you had, with all the patronage you had in your hands, you could not control them to act honestly in the matter. But I ask you one question more. How does it happen that in the mere matter of salaries the increase has been from $313,000 to something like $450,000? Show me a single veto that you have made in relation to salaries except your own. I know what you will say, "I have given evidence of my disinterestedness in the matter, by not taking an increase of salary to myself." Why, gentlemen, what would be two or three thousand dollars to a Mayor who understands financiering so well? (Loud applause.) Show me a single place where in any instance you attempted to stop the additional number of employes for the Common Council. "Did I not send a preparatory veto," you will say, "when I said that I should not increase the number of clerks in the office of the Counsel to the Corporation. Ah! but, Mr. Mayor, why was that preparatory veto sent in? It was because the late lamented Lorenzo B. Shepard had struck a blow at corruption, and you intended that he should not have the requisite force to carry on the business of the Counsel to the Corporation. (Cheers.) But I have had nothing to do, he may say, with the Corporation. Then my answer me in regard to the Joseph Walker affair. (Cheers.) (A voice—"And the glass ballot-boxes.") There is $12,000 to be paid for the raising of that vessel. I was informed to-day by a good Democratic friend of mine who was counsel in the case, that he had information and knowledge that a man by the name of Conlon, a poor Irishman, was willing to take it up for $5,000, and Wood would not let him take it up, because he wanted that Walter R. Jones should be paid $12,000. (A Voice—That was a swindle.) You account it a swindle, I don't call it anything. (A Voice—It's robbery.) I ask him what has become of the balance of the $13,000? I believe that $7,000 or $8,000 have been taken out, but Fleeg has put a veto on the payment of the sum due, and the money is there, safe and sound. (Cheers.) But, why did he go to the expense? Oh! because a petition was presented. A petition by whom? The people in the neighborhood of the sunken vessel. A quantity of timber, some 10 or 15 feet below the surface of the water was endangering the public health, and it required a large expenditure of the public money to raise it. (Laughter.) But where is the petition. Unfortunately it cannot be found. (Laughter.) A more unfortunate man with regard to documents, never existed than Mayor Wood. (Laughter.) Now, I ask him to explain that. Give me some reason why the petition cannot be found, and give us some of the names that were on it; but don't put on it the name of Van O'Linda, who, I am informed, was on it; but, as I am also informed, was also in the same office with Walter R. Jones. Now, that was the Joseph Walker affair. The next thing I want him to explain here is about the Lowber affair. That was to take from $190,000 to $200,000, interest included, from the treasury of the City of New-York. When it came before the Common Council there was a great deal of trouble in getting it through, and when it passed into the Mayor's hands what did he do? He forthwith vetoed it and signed it. (Cheers.) It was the feeling of the men, that he was not sincere in the matter. He was strong. He did not exactly wish to take the responsibility of being charged with the transaction. The papers were published in the Common Council, and the documents—(cries of "Good!")—are there, and which were read before me. There is the last man in the world who should be the friend of Mr. Lowber, and that is Mr. Wood, for he was the man who in the Common Council in relation to the purchase of the Lowber property, it was incorrect represented by him, and was wrong. Now, what was wrong? We are indebted to Judge Warren for having made the discovery—that about two-thirds of that property had no title whatever, so far as Mr. Lowber was concerned. (Calls for three cheers for Warren.) The property was at best in dispute; and I would like to know how many men here would put $200,000 or even $100 in a piece of property the title to which was disputed. Not a man. But I don't intend to let the Mayor out. When Mr. Warren had discovered this, and the information was laid before the Common Council, that body passed a set of resolutions in which they directed the Counsel to the Corporation to make arrangements for freeing the personal property of the City, and to take the management out of the real estate of the City. It also further resolved that the Counsel to the Corporation should make no resistance to this matter of the Lowber claim. Within a very short time after the passage of that resolution it was approved by the Mayor, and now he becomes an indorser of the whole transaction. (Cheers.) I ask him to explain. I ask his friends to require of him when he addresses the assembly which is to meet here, why did he not veto or sign the Lowber claim; and if he gives a satisfactory answer to that, to demand of him why, when he knew that Judge Warren had discovered a flaw in the case, did he force it through, after the Common Council had dropped it, and why did he sign a set of resolutions calling on the Corporation Counsel not to resist this fraud upon the public treasury. (Cheers.) But the most transparent piece of all his honesty is the glass ballot-boxes. (Laughter. A voice: "Tell us all about that!") I have not time to go through the whole of it, but I state the fact upon the papers which have been presented to the Court that a tax-payer of the city of New-York has arraigned in the Courts of public justice in this city Mr. Fernando Wood and his brother, Benjamin Wood, for having been connected with the purchase of these boxes, and the result of the charges is to show that they hope to make the nice little sum of $30,000 out of the opposition. Now, they will say that this is not right. I only read the papers. I speak upon the papers as they appear in the Courts. I speak of the facts as they are known to most of you who take the trouble to read. And are we to say there is nothing in these charges? Are they all false? Why, of all the persecuted men that ever lived, I believe Fernando Wood to be the worst persecuted man. (Laughter.) But, gentlemen, there are reasons why this man should not take any measures to resist this torrent of corruption. He is like Uriah Heep—faithful to first principles. (Laughter.) His antecedents are of such a character that any man would be unwilling to confide to him the trust of an executor of his estate. I ask any man in this community, with a knowledge of the charges that have been made against him, how does it happen that Mr. Wood should be trusted by you as a public man, when you would not trust him in a private capacity? I put that to the vote (of every man here on next Tuesday. And before he deposits his ballot, he should ask himself conscientiously, Could I trust him as an honest man? The answer to it would be that he could not. Why, you are told that we misrepresent him. I should be the last man in the world to misrepresent anybody. You have seen the charge that he was indicted for a felony. I was associate counsel on that matter and I speak it upon my responsibility, and I hold in my hand at the present time that very indictment, which any one can see on the Court of Sessions file. (Cheers.) Here, then, is the indictment. The people will say, What was the charge. The charge was obtaining money by false pretences, which under our laws is a felony. (Cheers.) It seems incredible that a man with such a charge fixed upon him could offer himself for the suffrages of his fellow citizens, though it is still more incredible that such a man could be elected. But he never was elected by a majority vote of the citizens of New-York, while Mr. Buchanan got 29,000 he ran down to 8,000. He professes to be the friend of Mr. Buchanan, and I say here upon my responsibility that the man in the Democratic Party who has abused Mr. Buchanan most since the 4th of March last has been Fernando Wood. (Cheers.) Now you will ask me what does this indictment charge as false pretences? It charges him with having obtained money from Mr. Marvine by falsely pretending that certain bills which were made out against the firm in which Marvine and Wood were associated together in a speculation, were of a certain amount, when they were of a totally different amount. How did he get clear of that indictment? A poor man has to be tried. I have often said, as District-Attorney, that I have had no trouble with the poor, but the rich man's money always interfered with justice. (Cheers.) The distinction between the rich and the poor which he has attempted to draw he has experienced. And if you ask me how he got clear of it, I refer to the indorsement and find that it was filed on the 7th November, 1851, and there is no plea to the indictment. Why did he not plead not guilty? Because that would have sent him to a jury to try if that plea of not guilty was true or not. But did he meet the issue? No. If you will refer to the files of the Court you will find that the indictment was quashed on the 30th December, 1851, on the ground that it was barred by the statute of limitations. That is, in fact, admitting that all you see upon that record is true, but that you are one day too late. You should have opened prison doors 24 hours sooner. (Cheers.) Is it not hard to make these charges against any man? But it is a truth. The truth which cannot be removed from the records. And if gentlemen deny I allow me to refer them to the 10th volume to the Law Reporter, published in this City, in which the grounds of this decision are given. If he had stood that indictment by way of trial, what would have been the result? The documents which are here, contain a report of the case of Marvine against Wood, before the Court, and the testimony in that case would have conclusively convicted him under the indictment if he had gone to trial. I am shocked to see Mr. Cochrane, whose name is affixed to this record on the report of the referees, standing up in Tammany Hall and advocating his election. Mr. Cochrane calls upon me to go for regular nominations, and has the hardihood to say that if he was an incarnate devil, I was bound to support him. (Cheers.) Let me tell Mr. Cochrane, that when I was battling in the Democratic ranks in 1846, for Lewis Cass, Mr. Cochrane ought to have said then in the ranks, and stood by the regular nominations. (Cheers.) I tell you, gentlemen, that if Mr. Cochrane will stand by his own word and his own writing, that is all I shall ask him. And I charge that certain things in that report which go to show that Mr. Marvine's complaint was entirely well founded, and that that complaint is a representation, to use his own language, of fraud. What does Mr. Marvine charge in one place? That Mr. Wood exhibited to him a letter from Thos. O. Larkin, of California, in which he stated that he advised Mr. Wood to go into the speculation of exporting goods to that country. It was proved before the referees, by Mr. Larkin himself, that he never wrote that letter, that he did not know Mr. Wood at that time; and it was proved by three witnesses at least that they saw that letter which Mr. Wood had exhibited to Mr. Larkin's. What do you call that? (A Voice—Forgery.) I don't call it anything. (Cheers.) He showed to Mr. Marvine a bill of sale in which he stated that the bark J. W. Cater had been purchased by him for $12,000. It was proved upon the reference that it only cost $4,000. What do you call that? (A Voice—"Forgery." Another Voice—"Swindling." A third Voice—"Financiering." Laughter.) I will not go through all the details here, but I will give you one other fact. One of the bills presented by Mr. Wood to Mr. Marvine for the expenditures of the vessel, or cargo, was one of Signor Ponsoni, of this City, and the bill, as delivered to Mr. Marvine was $100 75. It was proved before the referees that the whole amount was for three cartages—75 cents. (Laughter.) Now, what do you call that? (A Voice—"Highway robbery." Laughter.) I will not go over the Marvine affair. I will take an illustration. I have spent all my life in New-York and I know something about it. On the east side of the Bowery a set of Jolly companions were watching for a chance to get into a barber's shop, and each of them wanted to get the first chance. They were on the opposite side of the street from where the shop was, and one of them snatching up his coat rushed out to get into the shop. As he crossed the street he lost his pocket-book out of his side pocket. A man who kept some kind of a stand picked it up. A gentleman, seeing this, said: "That belongs to the man who has just gone round the corner there." But my friend was not so honest, and walked off with the pocket-book. After a little while a hunt was made for the man who ran away with the money, and they found him. He was tried in the Court of Sessions; these facts were proved, and the question was submitted to the jury whether he had taken the property of another feloniously? The jury found him guilty, and he was sentenced to the State Prison. I don't mention that man's name, because he has satisfied for his guilt to the law. Another case. A man kept an account with a bank. He had over $400 in it. The initial of his name was "W." a gentleman by the name of Yates. I being in the neighborhood of W., had a check for $1,750 upon an Albany Bank; it was deposited by Mr. Yates, and by some accident of this Mr. Yates, the money was transferred to Mr. W.'s account. In course of time all the money under the head of W. was drawn out, including, of course, the $1,750, and when the Bank discovered it, he was called upon, and when asked to explain it, he admitted that he had no such check. They asked him for his bank-book; but it was like the petition—it could not be found. (Laughter.) It was burnt up in a fire in Washington-street. But he would not pay until a suit was brought; and the three judges before whom it was investigated, Woodruff, Ingraham, Gilbert and McNamara, reported that Mr. W. owed the Bank more than $2,000, being the $1,750 with interest, and they made him charge that full amount. (Cries of "Good." "Are these honest?" "Moral!" What is the character of a man who took up the money which did not belong to him? (A voice—"None at all.") I don't call it so, but I will name no name—I will name the man that kept the bank account—he is Fernando Wood, the Mayor of the City of New-York. (Groans and hisses.) I know what people will say: that this is hard talking. No, it is not. These are hard facts—(A voice, "Stubborn facts")—stubborn facts—you cannot get them out. There is no use of saying they are in the newspapers, while they are on file. They form the permanent records of the Courts. I do not track him as we usually do a criminal through the newspapers. I track him through the civil and criminal courts. (Laughter.) Do you think I would stand up here and dare to talk in this way without undeniable facts to support me? (A Voice—No.) I know I shall be charged with all sorts of Billingsgate. But I appeal to you if I have used one hard word. (A Voice—Not half hard enough.) I refer to these facts, gentlemen, for one simple reason. I am not a believer in the administration of public affairs by men wanting in character. (Cries of "Good," and cheers.) I believe that this government is a magnificent experiment. I believe that upon the intelligence and the virtue of the people the foundations of this government can alone rest. I am unwilling to have men in the executive chair who are not such men as a man could point to with pride and associate with in private life. (Cries of "Good.") It is to the honor of the country that men who have held the highest offices in the Government of the union of the State and of the City up to the present time have been without stain, and for the first time—and I blush that he was elected by the Democracy—we have a man who is covered over with indictments and charges. (Applause.) You ask me are you willing that a change should take place in the City Government whereby all the present arrangements of your party shall be upset? There is no party in the Democratic Party but the Fernando Wood Party, if he is at the head of it. It is a question with the public men who are leading in political affairs, whether they will have their party prostrated for the advancement of one man's interest, or whether it shall be the great means of ameliorating the condition of the people. I ask any Democrat who intends to vote for Mayor Wood to reconcile such vote with his message here within the last few weeks. The resolutions at Tammany Hall the other night denouncing the message of Mayor Wood are my guide. By these resolutions I stand. I endorse their sentiment and repudiate the man. (Cheers.) Mr. McKeon alluded at length to the Mayor's message, which he characterized as worthy of the first French revolution, and described the people being fully alive to the character of his machinations in connection with the Mr. McKeon denied that he was at all concerned in the ordering of the United States troops to protect the Custom House and Sub-Treasury, and declared his belief that there was force enough in public sentiment to frown down any attempt at disorder. He charged Mayor Wood with cowardice, accused him of throwing factious obstacles in the way of the transaction of public business, as exhibited in his refusal at first to cooperate with the Police Commissioners or promote the improvement in the Central Park under the new Board, though he subsequently surrendered in both, having taken his seat in the Board of Police Commissioners which he denounced as unconstitutional, and having requested the Common Council to pass appropriations for the Central Park. Why then, if he had yielded in these two cases, should he not also yield in the matter of the new City Hall? and thus most effectually aid the unemployed poor whom he professed so much affection? Mr. McKeon alluded to the fact that the Mayor had sanctioned an ordinance of the Common Council which increased the expenditures for employés in the Street Department $25,000, over the expenditures of last year. In conclusion he passed a glowing eulogium on Mr. Tiemann, the People's Candidate, and exhorted them to the utmost energy, and most untiring effort in order to secure Wood's defeat. He resumed his seat amid terrific cheers.

SPEECH OF DANIEL E. SICKLES, ESQ.

Mr. Daniel E. Sickles, on coming forward, was received with three hearty cheers. He said: Mr. President and fellow-citizens—New-York has sent forth a vast assemblage to-night. From stage to dome her thousands appear here to make one effort, at least, for the honor of our noble metropolis,—and tens of thousands are assembled at the portals of this hall, unable, but anxious to join in your demonstration. You have met at least to affirm one of the doctrines laid down by Mr. Wood. In the first message which he sent to the Common Council of New-York, upon his election to the office of Mayor, he proclaimed to the people that party politics had nothing to do with municipal affairs; and as the period approaches when his administration is to terminate, New-York is here to-night to express its concurrence with him in that sentiment. (Loud cheers, and a voice, "He'll find it, to his cost.") And, fellow-citizens, it is time; for although, as my friend McKeon, who preceded me, has said, our Republic may in some respects be yet regarded as an experiment, it is, nevertheless, an ascertained fact that in the government of the nation and in the government of States, our system has been a triumphant and magnificent success. But in municipal government, if we are to take the administration of Fernando Wood as an example, it has been a disgrace that it will take time—years of time to eradicate. (Cheers.) It is necessary, then, that all true Democrats—that all true Americans—that all men who have a pride and patriotism in the success of our system of Democratic Government should rally—should unite—as Americans, as Republicans—as citizens—as Democrats, to rescue our City from a domination alike disgraceful to it, and disgraceful to a Democratic form of Government. (Applause.) There are, perhaps, many in this Hall, as there are in the Democratic Party, who in 1856 cast their ballots for Fernando Wood. It is well, to-night, while we are remedying that we will vote for him no more, to consider and determine between Fernando Wood in 1856 and Fernando Wood in 1857. (A Voice—How the same man? Laughter.) Last year, fellow-citizens, it was believed, because his friends [illegible] that he would [illegible] to secure for New-York a respectable and honest government. His promises were both fair and specious. He promised to surround himself with the most reputable citizens, who were willing to subscribe their names and pledge publicly their honor for his conduct in office. How have those promises been fulfilled? How have those pledges been redeemed? I will not go through a long catalogue of his misdeeds; I will not enumerate the list of his conduct which have falsified all those promises and disappointed those expectations, for they have been enumerated by the distingu

The French Exhibition.

The question, "what constitutes a school of art?" has been easily asked, but answered; for we distinctly object to using phrases without a reasonable hope, at least, of being understood, we must attempt a definition. For we have already committed ourselves to the opinion that the French "school" of painters is decidedly the leading school in contemporary art as well as to the belief that the exhibition which now adorns the walls of the old "Art Union" in Broadway very impartially represents the said preeminent school.

And although people in general do not care one sixpence whether there be or be not such a thing as a school of art upon the face of the earth, in or out of France, but are perfectly well content with a show of good pictures, come they from whatever quarter, and with whatever protestations, still, as there is a school of art in France, we must beg permission to say a word on that subject before we proceed on to speak of the merits and attributes of the gallery in Broadway. A school in art, then, is as nearly as possible analogous with a school in literature. The objects of the author and the artist are, in this respect, identical, that each of them having certain conceptions of truth, a certain perception of beauty to communicate, each also desires so to convey these conceptions of his to the public mind as to secure at once a willing reception and a natural influence. Each of them (deserving the name, that is, of author or of artist) keeps this aim steadily before him in his work.

Whenever a number of men, animated by this aim, have been for some time pursuing the profession of literature or of painting, there a school of art or of letters tends to arise. Each individual need not confine ourselves, for brevity's sake, to pointing out those who succeeds in making himself prominent and welcome to his public contributes in a measure certain valuable suggestions for the assistance of others, his fellow laborers. These suggestions are adopted; the methods of one man have proved efficient to the production of particular results are pursued by others who esteem these results worth achieving, and gradually a body of artistic truth is formed which takes its place in the history of Art, to be like all other truth a help forever to the wise, and a hindrance only to the weak. To say, then, that a nation possesses a School of Art, is to say that in that nation Art has been assiduously and successfully prosecuted by a number of minds of various devotion, and that the artistic world of that nation, however varied they may be in character by the varying personal qualities of the individual artists, their producers, do yet partake of a common spirit, and bear the traces of a ripened national genius. And any exhibition will properly represent a national school which gives a just notion of the leading methods of painting pursued in it, and a fair representation of the leading tendencies of the national genius. Thus, the Roman school might be studied in the Gallery of the Museo Borbonico, which yet does not boast a single work of that school; and the Florentine school of LEONARDO DA VINCI, by an amateur whose exquisite taste has been displayed in the Brera Gallery at Milan, which yet possesses no chef d'œuvre of the contemporaneous Florentine.

Thus, too, it is that to speak of the "English School" is almost an improperity, since art in England has heretofore been prosecuted in a desultory manner with little dignity and persistency of aim, and consequently with so few original and characteristic results, that the London Times, in speaking of the Exhibition which has just closed at Manchester, dwells with particular satisfaction on the hope that this Exhibition may have done something towards enabling England "to produce at some future day a school of art which shall be truly national and express English feeling in forms based on its true genius."

This fragment has been the history of art in France. The great age of the Renaissance in Italy was rapidly followed by an age of artistic development in France, and since the Italian genius relinquished from its primacy in the world of beauty, no school of art has maintained on the whole so high a level through an extended period of time as the French, while at the present hour the artists of that country stand confessedly at the head of their profession throughout the world in consummate skill in productive power, and in the scientific of their artistic aims.

In the greatest departments of pictorial art, indeed, the leading Frenchmen of the present day are not only unrivaled, but almost unapproached. The names of MASSNACH and CORNELIUS, in Germany, cannot, indeed, be uttered without respect, but Germany stands alone among his contemporaries in a succinct representative of that devotion to the ideal in Form which lodged in the heart of RAPHAEL and has made the name of the painter of Urbino the watering synonyme for the harmony of form with power. Realism in art, useful up to the point at which it corrects the extravagances of fancy and therefore the undue confidence of executive skill, when raised to the rank of an artistic principle, tends to get more below nature, and to sometimes feeling to feel, just as materialism in philosophy results in the elevation of comfort over duty, to elevate, that is, the "Fornarina" of the Florentine Tribune above the "Madonna" of the Dresden Gallery. Against this tendency, which has manifested itself to the art just as its correlatives have in the literature and the life of the present age, the imaginative genius and the scholastic idealism of INGRES most splendidly protest. His Venus is the Venus Anadyomene, with never a taint on her beauty of those instincts which belong to her Pandemic sister. The influence of this great painter is to be traced through the recent annals of art in France in a hundred creations, which adorn the halls and churches of Paris, the palaces of the great and the galleries of the nation.

Two artists, however, divide with INGRES the leadership of modern art in France—DELACROIX and PICARNE.

DELACROIX's choice is light as INGRES in form, and bears that same relation to the schools of Florence and Venice that INGRES sustains to the schools of Rome. His Protean pencil reproduced with equal power now the splendors of PAUL VERONESE and now the carnations and the exuberant warmth of RUBENS. His "Salon de la Paix" in the Hotel de Ville at Paris is a wonder of sunshine and health, fresh, pulsant and vigorous as the day. More intensely and imaginative than DELACROIX, DECAMPS is a master of modeling and of relief. His canvas in the past are with CORREGGIO and with REMBRANDT. He may fairly be ranked as the great Painter of shadow, with a sort of passionate extravagance, and painting modern sitters no one approaches him in the power of representing the effects of sunlight. His Turkish and American Landscapes of our own country, covering a better notion than any other pictures have been seen on this side the Atlantic of the peculiar vividness and glow of light in the East by DECAMPS.

Around these are grouped a series of artists of high and varied merit, some being worthily every element of the master's art. The genius of PAUL DELAROCHE really addressed itself to historical art, all that pale Hadrian started when without reaching it, through all the grandeur, chivalry, life and invention of the ordinary contemporaneous painter. Of the intrinsic sensibilities failed to combine with his heroes by omitting the subtle of the Christian Age. Francis, something also the purity of Germany, and now the living masters of his own country, has nevertheless succeeded in interesting the cultivated public of many countries. The battle-pieces of VERNET are hardly less famous than the scenes which they commemorate. The landscapes of BOUGUEREAU, SIMON, FRANCAIS and TROYON, the sea painting of GUDIN, the interiors of MILLET and MEISSONIER, the pieces of HANON, the poems of FERRE, bear a magnificent testimony at once to the fertility of the French genius, and to the beneficent influences of the thorough cultivation of art in France. Of many of these men we have the actual works before us in the collection now exhibiting in Broadway, while not one of the great tendencies of French art is there utterly unrepresented.

The first thing which strikes the spectator on entering the gallery is an indescribable harmony of excellence. The few positively bad pictures which deform the walls are quite sunk out of sight in the general elevation of the works. This trait of the gallery is at once indicative of the rank of French art, and extremely conducive to the enjoyment of the individual pictures which one after another address themselves to the eye and arrest the mind.

Of these individual pictures the first upon which the observer will naturally fix his attention is a work of ROSA BONHEUR, catalogued as the "Denizens of the Highlands" (No. 16.) The said denizens are three small cattle, or "stots," breasting the wind upon a breezy hill." This picture is positively exhilarating. The beasts are alive with health and strength; there is life in their full, clear eyes—life in the sparkling of the hair upon their shaggy sides—life in the luminous transparency of their vigorous horns. Without a particle of affectation, ROSA BONHEUR has preached in this canvas a "sermon of herds and hills." When the sun vouchsafes to visit the gallery, and lights up the rolling clouds of the distance, and quickens the tones of the foreground in the picture, it is impossible to look upon it without a freshening of the brain, and a kindling of the fancy.

Just as a piece of skillful painting, too, the "Denizens of the Highlands" demands careful study. There is a truth of detail in the treatment combined with a breadth of effect which show that the sincere worship of Nature is by no means confined to the pretentious few who make broad their phylacteries in that kind. Near the "Denizens of the Highlands" hangs an amazing little chef d'œuvre, by MEISSONIER—the "Chess-Players"—which might have been painted by a fairy pencil. It is literally "amazing." The power with which the effect of the greatest breadth of handling is reached by the minutest strokes, and the boldest modeling accomplished by processes which would seem to require the microscopic patience of a monkish illuminator, is something magical. But having said this, there is little more to be said. The merit of the picture, as a composition, is not remarkable. It is a not very striking subject treated in a not very striking way, and its claims to the high rank accorded to it are of just such a nature that they would be enhanced in an inverse ratio with the contraction of the dimensions of the picture. If MEISSONIER had succeeded in painting his "Chess-Players" on the back of a watch, that is, his picture would be fifty times more astonishing than it now is, while if he had treated it in a space of six feet by five it would rank simply with half-a-dozen capital Copleys which we can now call to mind. Very different are the intrinsic excellences of the pictures of EDOUARD FRERE, of which one of the best, the "Laundress," (No. 76,) hangs near by the "Chess-Players."

FRERE is a poet in feeling and in fidelity. There is no object essential to his theme which is too trivial in his eyes to be treated with patient truth, while his great skill in handling never betrays him into mistaking the order of interest in his compositions. The thought from which the picture grew is the picture's first appeal to the spectator. The affections of childhood, its whims, its vagaries, its pretty, preposterous dreams—the pains and pleasures of youth—some innocent drama or simple incident of domestic life: these are the topics in which FRERE delights, and these he treats with a sympathetic earnestness, equally free from the extremes of sublimerie and of cant. This interest in home and in childhood, by the way, is characteristic of a very large class of French artists, as it is a trait of the national character which those will most warmly acknowledge who most thoroughly know the people of France. It is abundantly illustrated in the Broadway Exhibition.

Look, for instance, at the children of LANDANT DE METZ, a pupil of ARY SCHEFFER, who does his master more credit than his master's own work. (No. 180,) the "Christ Crowned with Thorns." There is some fine drawing in this picture, and a sensuous of DELACROIX in the carnations, but the sentiment is feeble, and the disposition commonplace. A far more touching work is the "Church Porch" of LAMPERT, (No. 132,) which is just a picture of a little child pausing at the benitier of her village church. There is not a strong tint in this charming little work, and yet so skillfully are the tones graduated and combined that there is nothing cold or hard in the painting, while the simple thought and true feeling of the composition gains upon one with every instant that is given to it. Near the "Church Porch" is a sea-view by GUDIN, (No. 85,) which barely misses being a great picture. It lacks character as a composition, but in power and breadth of handling it is quite exceptional. There is a lustrous life in the watery circles that break around the brown rock in the foreground, and a shimmer in the mists of the middle distance unequaled in any marine picture ever before exhibited in this City. The "Old St. Valérie," (No. 105,) and the "Stiff Breeze" (No. 106,) of EUGENE ISABEY, although much more common-place, both in composition and in color, have great technical merit. The drawing of the No. 105 is particularly good.

The names of COUTURE and VERNET naturally arrest attention in the catalogue. It is best that the attention being arrested should acquiesce, and not adventure in search of either the "Combat" (No. 210) or the "Minstrel" (No. 36.) The first of these is an absurd trifle, doubtless thrown off by HORACE VERNET years ago, and only worth possessing on the principle which moves people to acquire the autograph of a poet or a statesman, though it be affixed to nothing loftier than an I. O. U. or an invitation to dinner. The "Minstrel" is a work of greater pretension, but not more satisfactory. COUTURE is a painter who stands, both in point of skill and in point of imagination, very much where the French artists of the Regency stood, and this picture might just as well have been painted in 1740 as in 1856, and might better never have been painted at all. It is coarse in sentiment, and hard in execution. There is power, nevertheless, in the figure of the child, who stands with her back to the rest of mankind on the right of the picture, and gazes intently up into the minstrel's face. Near the "Minstrel" of COUTURE are two works by BEAULIEU, a pupil of DELACROIX, which afford an admirable idea of the style of that master.

As original conceptions these pictures (Nos. 3 and 4) are simply absurd, the No. 4, in particular, indicrously so. It represents a young lady in a very unelaborate costume, listening to the amorous ditties of a young gentleman in a masquerading dress. It is impossible to imagine in what sort of a building the lady is housed, at what time of day the lover has chosen for his melodious addresses. The inconsistency between the lights of the foreground and of the distance recalls the fantastic world of the Arabian nights.

But the force and reality with which the subtleties of the picture are handled, the splendor and warmth of the coloring—the vigor of the modelling—carry one back to the best periods of the Venetian school.

Of TROYON'S BOUGUEREAU, in many respects the first of living landscapists, there is no specimen in the gallery, but the study of nature in France is amply illustrated by a series of pictures from the easels of TROYON and LAMBINET. The "Watering-Pool" of TROYON (No. 203) is an especially charming landscape, the lights well distributed, and the whole atmosphere seductive. LAMBINET has treated a number of English scenes with much feeling and force. These pictures, we understand, were painted in England during the past Summer expressly for this exhibition, and for sale in America. This, which was the original design of the exhibition, has been held in view throughout its history. On their way from France, the pictures were delayed at Manchester for a short time, at the request of the French artists, who wished their school to be more justly represented than it was in the Trafford-square Exhibition; but all the pictures there displayed were brought away to New-York, with the exception of two, which were disposed of to an American gentleman, Mr. WRIGHT, of New-Jersey, who also possesses ROSA BONHEUR'S noble picture of the "Horse Fair."

Many other contributions have since been received from France, and many artists who appeared at Manchester with only one or two slight works, have come to us with their best. Such is the case, for instance, with CUNYNGHEM, to whose pretty little picture of "Fowls" (No. 37) several others have been added, and among them, one, the "Poultry Yard," (No. 38,) which is a marvel of detail. Those who remember a small picture by this artist which was exhibited at the Exhibition of our own Academy, last Spring, will need only the mention of his name to assure them of the pleasure which is in store for them, if they have not yet delighted their eyes with these new products of his masterly hand. CUNYNGHEM'S treatment of plumage is all that TAIT'S promises to be, and in saying this we pay a compliment to both artists, which neither of them should disdain. There is nothing of a similar kind in the English Exhibition to compare with it, excepting LANCE'S exquisite water-colors, in which truth of substance has been carried as far as realism can be carried, or ought to be.

Everybody who knows anything of French art will be glad to recognize the spirit of GUERIN in the pencil of one of his best pupils, BRION. This artist sends five pictures of marked but unequal merit. The finest in point of sentiment and expression, (No. 24,) a "Burial in the Vosges," almost atones for certain defects of handling by its strength and simplicity of composition. A train of mourners, the humblest of the peasantry, are drawing over the snow the corpse of one of their number. Through the dim and frosty air you discern, bowed down with age and grief, the mother, who has followed them to the gate of their desolated home, and who leans upon the fence, her face buried in her hands, the silent image of a woe too deep for words.

There is a veracity of feeling in this picture which we praise very highly when we rank it in this respect with Mr. FERRIER'S "Convict Returned," (No. 149,) of the English gallery, which is altogether the most poetic and powerful of the "imaginative" pictures of that gallery.

Without entering into more extensive details of criticism upon this admirable collection of French works, we must urge upon our artists as well as upon our amateurs, the importance of a careful study of this collection during the short remaining time of its presence among us. For we hope to see positive fruits of the good seed here to be gathered when next the National Academy shall open its doors to the aspirations and the achievements of our native art.

FROM BOSTON.

The Rumored Defalcation—Mr. Sumner's Return—Theatres, Lectures, etc.—The Mayoralty Question—The Atlantic Monthly for December—The City Library—A Gloomy Thanksgiving Week, &c.

BOSTON, Monday, Nov. 23, 1857.

The declining interest in the panic was partially renewed at the close of last week by reports affecting the character and conduct of the senior partner in one of our principal mercantile houses which suspended payment in October. So far as appears, though the gentleman alluded to may have been imprudent, there is no reason for charging him, as some do, with dishonesty; and even imprudent would not be the just word to apply to his conduct had it not been for the occurrence of the crisis, which interfered with his far-reaching plans, and brought attention to business details that otherwise would not have been so much as thought of. The house referred to has not made illegal use of a single dollar of the money of others. They are guilty only as most other business men are guilty, that is, they undertook to do too much, and, a storm coming on, they could not weather it. They are simply unfortunate, but in some cases there can be no greater crime than misfortune; and, just now, everybody is looking out for a scapegoat on which he can have the privilege of packing his own sins, so that an imprudent or an unfortunate man can look for no quarter. Then those who suppose they have lost money through his action are not only naturally indignant, but look upon one who has destroyed or perilled their property as a sinner of the worst dye; and their sharp cries, like the voices of women in a tempest, are heard above the din and roar of the elements. There's nothing like the loss or endangering of money to make men shrewish.

Mr. KUHN, who succeeds Mr. LAWRENCE as Treasurer of the Bay State Company, is one of the most upright of men, and thoroughly familiar with business. He is also a man of great amiability of temper, which I take to be as much a recommendation in a man of business as anything that can be named, after honesty and capacity; and without it even honesty and capacity cannot be rated at their full value.

Two or three additional candidates have sprung up in the Seventh Congressional District, but the only one of them worthy of special mention is Mr. S. E. SEWALL, who is a good man, a good lawyer, and a good scholar. He was in the State Senate in 1852, as a Free-Soiler, and drew up the first "Personal Liberty Bill" that ever was heard of here, and which, after passing the Senate through a combination of Free-Soilers and Democrats, was killed in the House through a combination of Democrats and Whigs. I doubt if Mr. SEWALL has any Congressional ambition, as he is not the kind of man to like Washington life.

Mr. SUMNER got home on Thursday evening, the 19th; and when the Niagara reached the wharf, I suspect that he was full of regret that he had not taken passage in some vessel bound to New-York. He is one of the most modest of men, and dislikes all "noise and confusion." Without going so far as the Frenchman, who said that those who visited him did him an honor, and those who stayed away did him a favor, he prefers that his company should be selected by himself, and that it should be quiet, orderly and not over-numerous. A story is told of him to the effect that when he was chosen Senator in 1851, he left town as soon as he heard of the fact, in order to avoid the boisterous congratulations of the crowd, which would very naturally have been tendered him at the close of a three months' controversy of the bitterest character. Such a man was not likely to be pleased at the reception which was got up for him on Thursday, and which failed in the only point success in which can make such things respectable: the crowd not being large enough to make its action dignified. There is something so impressive about large bodies of men that it requires a great deal of folly in their conduct to destroy their dignity. Mr. SUMNER said as little as he well could, and would have preferred to say nothing. The next evening, his too kind friends bewed for him at the lecture given by Mr. BAYNE before the Mechanics' Apprentices' Library Association; and he came forward and spoke briefly. These intrusions on public men are in vile taste, and reconcile those of us who are estranged to private life to our lot. "The rabble's curse" which Macbeth so much disliked, and which must have aggravated the sufferings of ruthless Rome's victims, can hardly be considered as grating more harshly on delicate ears, than the friendly, but ill-timed shouts of men whom it would be unjust to call rabble, but who certainly do not act like gentlemen.

The Bouzani Ballet Troupe have been very successful at the Boston Theatre, and have been engaged for the Thanksgiving week, when many visit theatres who do so at no other time. The other theatres are doing as well as could be expected. Mrs. BARROW'S Readings are popular. The givers of lectures have large audiences, but I suspect they assemble to see the lions rather than to hear them roar. Mr. BAYNE took Mr. PARKER'S place, on Friday evening, and had a great house; and General CUSHING had a fine one on Tuesday evening. HENRY GILES will lecture on the Brontë Family to-morrow evening, before the mercantile; and Signor FONTANA is to give his views on King Bombo, before the same institution, on the evening of the 25th. There's certainly a chance for a choice in men and subjects.

The attempt, under the name of a citizens' movement, to combine all parties in support of the same candidates for municipal officers, has, thus far, proved a total failure, as if it were a bank. The Convention of seventy-two (72) has had three long sessions, the last extending over to past 1 o'clock on Saturday morning, and was very disorderly and undignified in its conduct, much more so, indeed, than mass conventions generally are. There have been about a score of ballotings for a candidate for Mayor, but without result. The last balloting came within one of ending in the nomination of Mr. PRESCOTT, who received 36 votes, 37 being the requisite number. It was then moved that the Convention dissolve, but though the spectators applauded the motion, the delegates declined to entertain it, and the Convention separated to meet this (Monday) evening, when they will make another attempt to milk he-goats into sieves.

Mr. PRESCOTT, who came so near getting the nomination, is a master-builder, a man of wealth, and in politics so little of a radical that he supported Mr. FILLMORE at the last Presidential election. I think, however, that the Democrats ought to have the nomination, and so think many of those who would as soon think of enlisting under the banner of BRIGHAM YOUNG as under that of President BUCHANAN. They have never had a Mayor of Boston, and their turn would seem to have come. Then they put forward good men. The best man voted for in the Convention is Colonel HEARD, who has never been anything but a Democrat, and who is a liberal Hunker—able, manly, of high character, and of most commanding presence. Indeed, if appearance could command station, he might aspire to the Presidency with confidence. The Democrats should have adhered to him in the Convention, and in so doing they would have done the public a service, for I believe such adherence would have ended in his nomination.

The impression is that the movement cannot succeed, and there will be several candidates placed before the people; but the meeting of this evening may possibly turn out better work than we have seen the other meetings accomplish, though it requires considerable of the sanguine element in a man's temperament to make him so believe. The Democrats must have American or Republican support to elect their man, even should they get the nomination for him; and how could they justify a "coalition," to their friends abroad, with men who condemn all that has been done concerning Slavery by the National Government during the last four years? Would not that Cleopatra's pearl, the Union, be dissolved in the sourness caused by the formation of such an alliance?

JOHN P. HEALEY, a stiff Old Hunker Whig, has been named as a Union candidate for the Mayor; but though he is in many respects an excellent man, I do not think he would satisfy public expectations. He used to be Mr. WEBSTER'S partner and may be regarded as the representative of the relics of the Webster party.

The December number of the Atlantic Monthly will be issued on Wednesday, the 25th, in season for Thanksgiving. It has eighteen articles, which afford room for variety. The opening one is the conclusion of MOTLEY'S "Florentine Mesiaca," and is good as the first part. The writer is almost as severe on the Medici as in his History he is on the Austro-Burgundian chiefs of the Spanish Empire. What he says about the sculptures at the tombs of Rome of some of that race's members ought to be read in connection with what is said in the last Edinburgh on the same subject. The account of "The Battle of Lepanto" is probably from PARKMAN'S third volume of "Philip the Second," which, at least, will account for the abruptness of its commencement, and for allusions to preceding passages not given in the article. As we are to wait some months, perhaps a year, for that volume, and the fourth, readers ought to be thankful for this installment of a good thing. It contains no allusion to the remarkable fact—remarkable, I mean, it true,—that what is known in naval warfare as "breaking the line" (and about which there has been so much inkshed as by which there has been bloodshed) was first done at Lepanto, and by the Turks, who were the lovers of the modern Actium. There is a sound paper on CARLYLE, and a remarkably trenchant one on the subject of the political power of the Slaveholders. The stories are good, and the book notices are scholarly productions. "Our Birds, and Their Ways," is, perhaps, by HENRY THOREAU. The second part of of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table" is amazingly clever, and capable of making a man laugh who has failed yesterday, or—a much more difficult thing—who expects to fail to-morrow.

The annual report of the Trustees of the City Library shows that 8,616 volumes were last year added to that institution, and 3,067 pamphlets. There are about 35,000 volumes in the library and 18,000 pamphlets, besides newspapers, charts, and engravings. These are exclusive of Mr. BAYNE' donations of books, which amount to more than 21,000 volumes.

Captain W. W. FRENCH has been appointed Naval Storekeeper at Charlestown, vice HENRY WILDE, resigned. Mr. WILDE is a brother-in-law of Gen. CUSHING, and he took the office on the death of Mr. JAMESON, who was a brother-in-law of Gen. FRENCH. The new storekeeper has for years been the chief clerk in the office, and is an out-and-out and an in-and-in hunker.

Men feel gloomy, the European news, so different from the first responses to the panic intelligence sent from here, having depressed them terribly. Thanksgiving week, instead of being that joyous time it ordinarily is, is black as Lent. Far from being grateful, too many of us are indulging that "sad and sour dissent" from commonly received opinions that is the child of adverse fortune. Spite of what the preachers and the poets say, adversity never yet made any human being good.

HORRIBLE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—Somewhere on the line of the Baltimore and Philadelphia Railroad, between Wilmington and Perryville, the 11 o'clock P. M. train of Tuesday night ran over and killed a man, but at what particular point has not been ascertained. The accident occurred without the knowledge of the engineer or conductor, nor was it known until the train reached Perryville. As the persons employed for that purpose were placing the cars of the train on the boat, they discovered something like flesh on one of the trucks. A closer examination proved it to be portions of the trunk, one arm and the leg of a man, but all so much mutilated as to be hardly recognizable. The head, one leg and one arm were missed, and up to yesterday afternoon had not been found, though a strict search had been made along the line of the road between the points mentioned. It is supposed that the person killed attempted to jump on the train at one of the water stations, and slipping, fell under the train. There were strong shreds of clothing about the axle of the truck, but nothing could be found to give any definite idea of the dress of the man.—Baltimore Sun.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Probability of the Mormons Quitting Senora—California as the Base of Military Operations—The New Expedition to Nicaragua—Kansas Affairs, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 19, 1857.

I find that the probability of BRIGHAM YOUNG'S leading his followers from Salt Lake to the Mexican Province of Sonora, has attracted the attention of our Government, and become a point of serious consideration in the discussion of the policy to be pursued towards the Mormon rebels. Mr. BUCHANAN is anxious to acquire the Province of Sonora from Mexico; but if the Mormons were once to get settled there, it would put an end to all hope of success,—for public sentiment in the United States would never consent to the acquisition, of any foreign territory however valuable, on which the Mormons had taken up their quarters. Once out of the United States, the country would no more buy them back into our jurisdiction than it would purchase Delhi in the hands of the Sepoys. It becomes important, accordingly, to prevent a Mormon begin to Sonora, if possible.

But, on the other hand, it is feared that the Mexican Government would entertain with favor a proposition from BRIGHAM YOUNG to settle the Province, and protect that border from the Indian tribes who now devastate it, encroaching every year farther and further upon the domain of civilization, and driving its inhabitants towards the interior. Besides, the Mormons would defend the country from any filibuster approach in that direction, and pay a large annual tribute to the Government of Mexico, while they enriched themselves by working the valuable mines of the country. True, Mexico would find in the end that she had been nursing a viper most dangerous to her own peace; Mexican statesmen are not accustomed to look far into the future, and shape a present policy with reference to what is to come.

The policy of making California the base of operations against the Mormons has been urged upon the Executive. Among the arguments in its favor is the fact that the Valley of Salt Lake can be approached at all seasons from the Pacific, through the lower vallies and passes. Nor can the entrance to the Mormon country from that direction be successfully defended against Gentile troops. An army of twenty thousand men could enter Salt Lake Valley in mid Winter by the way of Los Angeles and San Bernardino, except for the fact that there is a single stretch of country in which, for a distance of one hundred and twenty miles, there is no water except a bitter spring. This difficulty it is thought may be overcome by establishing the depôt for the army at the foot of the great cañon of the Colorado, which is east of the desert referred to. This depôt is to be proposed to reach by the Gulf of California and the Colorado River, which is supposed to be navigable in the vicinity of the depôt suggested. It will be remembered that Lieutenant J. C. Ives is now engaged in an exploration of the Colorado. It is anticipated that early intelligence will be received from him on the general subject of the navigability of that stream.

From the fact that the Salt Lake country is so open to attack from the Pacific side, it is stated that if operations against the Mormons are contemplated thence, their object may be attained with less bloodshed than if the contest is waged in the narrow passes and cañons, where the Mormons, from their superior position, can hope to force the assailants to retire, and can be certain of making serious havoc among the troops, whatever the ultimate result. The alternative of meeting a large and well-disciplined army in open field would be likely to induce the Mormons to yield far more readily. But, in addition to these advantages of operating from California, the presence of so large a force in that country would overawe and terrify the numerous hostile Indian tribes there, who are becoming exceedingly troublesome; while it would effectually cut off the Mormon retreat towards Sonora—an object really of great importance, independent of considerations connected with any purpose of acquiring that Province, for it is eminently essential to the welfare not only of the United States, but of the civilized world, that Mormon abominations should be effectually checked, by the strict and prompt punishment (instead of flight) of the leaders of the rebellion.

Since the arrival of the last California mail, the opinion has gained strength here that Gen. WALKER has selected the Tehuantepec route for his new movement towards Central America. If this be true, the steamer Panama can run up the Coatzacoalcos River to a point thirty miles above the town of Minatitlan, and thence proceed by canoes, of which there is an abundance, to El Suchil, whence there is a good road across to Ventosa on the Pacific. The rainy season is now over, and as the water-courses are nearly all mountain streams, they become fordable within a few hours after the rains cease. There are two narrow rivers, perhaps one hundred feet wide, which are not yet low enough to be forded safely. These can be readily crossed by rafts, for the construction of which the materials are abundant.

If WALKER took that route, he probably arrived at the Coatzacoalcos in three days from Mobile, occupied three days in ascending the river, and not exceeding five or six days in marching across to the Pacific. Two gentlemen now in this City, who are thoroughly acquainted with the route, say that the march can be made in that time during the present season, without difficulty.

At Ventosa WALKER is expected to be met by his San Francisco recruits, with means of transportation; but it is quite uncertain whether he will carry out his plan of proceeding at once to the capital of Costa Rica, or will determine to return immediately to Leon, drive out the Martinez Government, and again assume the position which he claims as the rightful President of the Republic, who had been driven out by the interference of a foreign State.

His course on these points will be governed very much by the degree of success which attends the efforts made to concentrate his scattered forces immediately on arrival on the Pacific. If he finds himself well prepared for vigorous assault, he will probably not lose an hour in his effort to cripple Costa Rica; but if his reinforcements are backed slow, it will be more prudent for him to take his stand within the limits of Nicaragua, until his recruits join him.

Captain FARRAGUT is still understood to be in the United States, although his departure was announced. He did not return with General WALKER, because there is yet no field for the exercise of his professional skill. But if WALKER gets a footing again, and sets up a Government, the Government of the United States will recognize it at once. This done, the Pearson, or any other vessel belonging to WALKER, may enter Nicaraguan ports, there raise the flag of the Republic, and thence proceed in "armed expeditions," against whomsoever pirates they choose, for they will have become technically legal cruisers, pursuing the legitimate instructions of a legitimate Government. Captain FARRAGUT is waiting for this opportunity to distinguish himself again.

It is a great mistake to suppose that England will make any effectual objections to WALKER'S movements. Her Government has become satisfied that they can never get control in Central America without a successful war with the United States—a price far too great to pay for an object of no practical value to her even if it were attained. She finds that we are ready to meet her in guaranteeing the neutrality of all inter-oceanic communications; and that her only remaining interest there is a pure matter of trade and commerce.

In this respect it is England's undoubted interest to have General WALKER succeed, because the infusion of North American energy with that country to develop its resources and increase its population, cannot fail to make better customers for all manufacturing and commercial nations. This view of the subject, there is good reason to believe, has commended itself very forcibly to British statesmen of late,—and you may rely upon it, that if WALKER succeeds in the outset of his present enterprise, his Government, when again set up, will be speedily recognized by that of England. The policy of Great Britain in regard to Central America has entirely changed, and its course with reference to WALKER will probably be one of the earliest and most decided evidences of the fact.

If WALKER proceeded by the Tehuantepec route, he is to-day nearing the Pacific coast, and will be able to make his mark before the new treaty, which started yesterday, can reach Nicaragua. It is not at all improbable that, if he deems it advisable, he will place it out of the power of the Martinez Government to ratify the Convention. The result, however, will prove that the treaty is really in WALKER'S interest. It is clearly so, if he succeeds in getting control of the Government again, for it binds the United

ARRANGEMENTS FOR LAYING THE ATLANTIC CABLE.—[illegible] the first representatives of science in the Atlantic telegraph cable will be introduced to the public at Niblo's Garden, on the evening of the 30th inst., when a lecture will be delivered by Professor Morse, on the subject of electricity, and the Atlantic telegraph cable will be introduced to the public of Brooklyn for next year. In the first place, it will be exhibited on Tuesday, the 1st of December, and thence forward, for a week, or fortnight, or longer, if they be ample time to repair it, and still leave August open for another effort. By taking the same description of cable will be used, it is thought it would be difficult, if not quite impossible, to devise a better. For a week, indeed, hope it performed a most satisfactory degree the requisite qualities of lightness, strength, and perfect flexibility. The expedition started with about 2,000 miles of the cable last Summer, of which about one have been lost. Last week the strand and closing machines of Grain & Hayes were working night and day to make up this deficiency of one mile, but in all it will be necessary to spin 500 miles, as it has been determined not to joint again with less than 2,000 miles clear. This extra amount, however, is only to meet any unusual consumption that may arise, and not to allow for slack, as the smaller the quantity of slack paying out the safer will be the process of submerging, and the greater will be the ease with which the telegraph can after wards be worked. But it is principally to the improvement of the paying out machines that the efforts of the company have been directed. Last year these machines, aided by considerable obstinacy and rashness, ruined the cable twice, and the third being then effectually destroyed the present, the most trustworthy practitioners are now doing their best to bolt the stable door. The machines are being made under the special attention and directions of Mr. Field, Mr. Field, Mr. [illegible], Mr. Bennett, the other shareholders of the New-York Herald, Professor Morse, and other interested gentlemen, who have shown that in their solid conversation with the details of the plan upon which they are to be made we are not yet prepared to further risk that noble cable entrusted to guard against the strain on the cable caused by the sudden pitch of the vessel, and also that the weak in the wheels will be perfectly sufficient to stop it more than about one-third of the strain which the cable can safely be relied upon. Perhaps, however, in navigating the cable from the side of the Atlantic, it has been decided to commence operations by sailing the ends of the two vessels on board the Niagara and Agamemnon in the middle of the ocean, and each vessel then making the best of its way to land. The Agamemnon will take the shore, and the latter to Newfoundland. By this plan the operation of laying the cable will be got over in exactly one-half the time which it must otherwise occupy, and we need scarcely say that a[illegible] the chances of success because the risk from the weather is equal in proportion. The opponents of the plan are to be found among the dogs and Americans, who generally prefer the plan of laying down the cable from the New-World to the Old, and who adduce, as a strong other reason, the fact that the set of the Gulf stream is in that direction, and that it would be better for the cable to have the current in its favor than against it. But, as we believe the influence of the Gulf stream does not extend below 70 fathoms deep, it may be at least perceive how it can affect an undertaking to submerge a cable to the depth of more than 2,000 fathoms. A more reasonable objection lies in the fact that in the centre the cable must be joined, and that it has been determined not to join with a five-mile centre of steel wire, which would give it tenfold strength at this point. When to this deficiency we add the fact that the lay of each piece of cable is made in a different direction, and that one portion forms a right and the other a left-hand screw, each of which helps the other to untwist, we cannot, however reluctantly, help seeing that this joining in the centre is a blot in the whole scheme. Of course, a splicing in which a heavy square weight is to be attached to the joining) has been devised to prevent the wires untwisting if possible. But a weight at this junction is a most serious danger, though we are told that the whole mistake offers so many and such important "advantages," that it reminds us forcibly of the plea which an inhabitant of Laputa had made for a tailor who had cut his breeches behind instead of before: "Pray, gentlemen, consider how much better and cheaper than by any other method, supposing the tailor's one of cutting them with a knife, the tailor's one adaptation is rectified for this blunder, in turning our clothes all better and safer than any other method in which it would be done, except that of cutting it properly."—London Times.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met Monday night, Alderman CLAVEY, President, in the chair. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

A petition from the Unemployed Workingmen of the Thirteenth Ward, asking that they be provided with remunerative work, for the relief of their destitution, signed by over 100 persons, was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Subject of the Poor.

Alderman BURNS offered the following petition to the Board:

To the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York:

The undersigned, residents of the City of New-York, respectfully represent that this City has for a period of years been oppressed by a class of men known as Middlemen, or speculators in the produce of the country brought to this City, whereby the consumer is made to pay a large per centage for all the food he consumes beyond what he would pay, had he the privilege of purchasing directly from the producer. These facts are so well known that argument is superfluous.

Your petitioners have heretofore seen the futility of remedying these evils, as the class of speculators referred to, have acted in concert, and have always succeeded in baffling all organization for the relief of the citizens in this respect heretofore made.

But it is now hoped when poverty is staring a large portion of our population in the face, at the commencement of Winter, and at a time when numerous and well intentioned citizens who have heretofore contributed to the relief of the poor, have themselves become impoverished, that your honorable body will afford all the relief legitimately in your hands.

And your petitioners further represent that they know of no one act they could do that would afford more instant relief than to remedy the evils referred to.

Therefore, your petitioners pray that an ordinance may be passed, with all dispatch, that farmers from the country, with their wagons and other vehicles, be permitted to expose the produce of the country in Complaint-square, free from expense, under such regulations as your honorable body deem expedient to make, by the granting of which your petitioners believe that the poor, as well as others, in that region, will be enabled to save at least a quarter in every dollar time expended for the necessities of life.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT, JNO. M. BERRY,
HIRAM CRAMPTON, SEVERENS KNAPP,
W. H. APPLETON, and many others.

After reading of the above, Alderman BURNS proceeded to enlighten the plan of relief which it set forth. The petition, on vote, was referred to the Committee on Ordinances.

CONTRACT FOR STREET CLEANING.

Alderman TUCKER offered the following preambles and resolution:

Whereas, Section 26 of the Charter of 1851 is in substance as follows, viz: When any work is necessary to be done, or supplies to be furnished by the Corporation, they shall together have the exclusive power to contract, with the same shall be by contract, unless by a vote of three-fourths of all the members elected to each Board it shall be ordered otherwise; and

Whereas, The Common Council has by a three-fourth vote instructed the City Inspector to make a contract with certain parties to clean the streets, &c., for the term of five years, at the sum of $345,000 per annum; and

Whereas, Rumor states as to the power of the Common Council and City Inspector to make such contract, except by first advertising for proposals, &c., as required by the Charter and ordinances relating to the same, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Counsel to the Corporation be and he is hereby requested to report to this Board at its next meeting, his opinion in relation to the subject.

After slight debate this petition was laid over.

THE STREET WORK.

Alderman McGUINNESS's resolution in favor of grading and macadamizing Second-avenue, Forty-second-street to Ninety-second-street, under the supervision of Charles Spencer, came up for action, and gave rise to much debate. Alderman TUCKER denounced it as a job, and Alderman McGUINNESS emphatically repudiated the assertion that he had offered the resolution for buncombe. He had offered it in order that hundreds of the unemployed may find work and relief. Alderman BURNS opposed the motion. If it were passed and the men were not served, where was the money to come from to pay them with? Alderman CLAVEY said that there would be no difficulty in providing sufficient funds for carrying the work into effect. He was in favor of the resolution, as it was a well-known fact that the Second-avenue should be macadamized on either side of the street car track. Alderman FOX also spoke in opposition. The motion was finally adopted.

REMOVAL OF STEAMBOAT LANDINGS.

Alderman WILSON offered the following:

Whereas, There is a great diversity of opinion as to the powers and authority of the Common Council in the matter of removing the landing places of steamboats, the consideration of which is of the highest importance to the public interest, and which interest is in my opinion of the gravest character; therefore

Resolved, That the Counsel to the Corporation be requested to report to this Board what is the law of what has been and authority vested in the Common Council in the matter of the report of the Special Committee in the landing of the Sound and North River steamboats.

Alderman SPIRES moved that the resolution lie upon the table. Carried.

THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman McGUINNESS moved to take from the table the report of the Finance Committee for the reorganization of the Finance Department. The motion being carried, the Clerk proceeded to read the report, when Alderman McGUINNESS asked that the reading should be suspended, as there were only twelve members present.

Alderman TUCKER moved, that the report be again laid on the table. Lost.

Alderman McGUINNESS moved that the report should be made the subject of a special order at the next meeting of the Board.

Alderman TUCKER moved that all resolutions relating to the grading and regulating of Ninth-avenue be taken up and acted upon. If the Board were sincere in their desire to relieve the poor people out of employment, they would at once proceed in the matter by acting on such resolutions. The grading of the Ninth-avenue, blasting rocks, &c., could as well be done in Winter as Summer, and would be the means of relieving a large number of families now in distress.

Alderman OWENS hoped the resolution would be adopted, as it would give the Board the power to employ from 3,000 to 4,000 men, instead of only 1,000 men, whom they now employed in the Central Park.

The Chairman said he found that the original papers were lost, in the possession of the Board, and therefore the resolution could not be acted upon.

The Board then adjourned to Friday.

MARRIED AT THE CITY HALL.—PATRICK MCGOGAN and MARY DOYLE presented themselves to Alderman BARWIS on Monday, at the City Hall, and requested to be joined in holy matrimony. The Alderman executed the job, and the Clerk made out a certificate which Pat took with a bow and was about making off, when he was politely informed that he must pay 50 cents for the writing. "Ooh, but ain't I married?" inquired Pat. Certainly, said the Clerk. "Well, by the hole of my coat, then, that's all I want," said Pat; and he walked off with his MARY, fully satisfied,—but the clerk wasn't.

BOY RUN OVER AND KILLED BY AN OMNIBUS.—On Monday afternoon a boy, five years of age, was run over by an omnibus in the Bowery, near Houston-street, and instantly killed. Officer BARNS, of the Tenth Ward, arrested the driver Gaspar S. BENJAMIN, who was committed to await the investigation by the Coroner. The name of the boy is unknown. The body was taken to No. 61 Chrystie-street, where an inquest would be held.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—DANIEL M. QUINN, residing at No. 49 Chatham-street, was induced Saturday night by CATHARINE WILLIAMS, a characterless girl, to accompany her to her lodgings, No. 15 City Hall-place, and remain over night. On waking up yesterday morning, his companion was missing, and his wallet containing $30. The girl was subsequently arrested and committed by Justice OSBORN for examination. None of the missing money recovered.

POLITICAL.—The tax-payers of the Sixteenth Ward have nominated Dr. JAMES W. RAMSEY for Alderman. The Republicans and Americans have adopted the same candidate. The following have been nominated for School officers in the Ward by the United Americans and Republicans: ISAAC WM. SMITH, Commissioner; JOHN DELAMATER, GEORGE W. BROWN, M. ROSS and E. H. COMSTOCK for Trustees; and JOHN W. HOFFMANN for Inspector. For Police Justice, JOHN QUACKENBUSH has been nominated. The above constitute the Tiemann ticket in the Sixteenth Ward.

SWINDLER.—Officer WM. H. LOWERY, of the Recorder's Office, yesterday, received a letter from Mr. H. TIMANY, of Bond's village, Mass., calling attention to the lottery swindles in New-York, and offering to produce testimony against certain dealers. Mr. TIMANY compliments the officer for his efficient aid in recovering money from California ticket swindlers, and makes allusion to the last case of this kind published in the Times. The letter has been laid before the General Superintendent of Police.

FIRE IN BROADWAY.—At 7 yesterday morning a slight fire occurred in the dwelling-house No. 718 Broadway, occupied by WM. SCANE. A careless servant-girl was opening the parlor shutters with a lighted candle in her hand, when the curtains took fire, causing damage to the carpet and furniture of about $100, insured in the Aetna Insurance Company.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—CATHARINE DEFFERY, aged about [illegible] years, a native of the Highlands of Scotland, residing at No. [illegible] Mercer-street, attempted in the night to commit suicide by hanging herself with her garter to one of the bars of her cell door. Officer WATSON fortunately discovered her and cut her down in time to save her life.

LONG ISLAND.

DARING ROBBERY.—A man entered the jewelry store of CHARLES THOMAS, corner of Hicks and Middagh streets, Brooklyn, Monday evening, and asked to see some gold rings. The clerk produced a box, when he drew a revolver and said, "Walk this way." Walks the clerk was after another lot, the customer seized those which had been laid out valued at $[illegible] and made off. The clerk started in pursuit and succeeded in seizing hold of the thief, who turned upon his pursuer and fired two pistol shots at him, neither of which, however, took effect, and then made his escape.

SUICIDE.—CHRISTIAN HAMELLER, a German connected with the Long Island Volksblatt, committed suicide yesterday morning in a cell in the Sixth Precinct Station-house, Brooklyn, by hanging himself with a handkerchief, one end of which he attached to a bar of iron crossing the cell window. He was committed the night before on complaint of his wife for intoxication and ill-treatment. Deceased was 60 years of age.

KINGS COUNTY JAIL.—There are 39 prisoners in this jail for the following offences:

Murder, 3; burglary, 12; receiving stolen goods, 1; grand larceny, 5; petit larceny, 4; rioting, 2; assault with intent to kill, 2; assault and battery, 2; assault with intent to ravish, 1; false pretences, 1; and three confined as witnesses.

☞ Eighty-four arrests were made by the Brooklyn Police during the 48 hours ending Monday morning. During the same time 43 lodgers were accommodated in the different Stations. Of the arrests made 30 were Americans and the balance Irishmen and Dutchmen.

DOORKEEPERS.—The following persons have been appointed to fill the vacancies in the office of Doorkeeper at the different Station-houses in Brooklyn:

Second Precinct—Patrick Burns and George Parkes.
Third Precinct—Michael Caswell and Isaac Simonton.
Fourth Precinct—Chas. D. Butler and Robert Blanke.
Eighth Precinct—Harman Stafford.
Ninth Precinct—John Hooper.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A little child of JAMES WHELOCK, residing at No. 77 Hopkins-street, Brooklyn, was run over by a car on the Greenpoint route, and so severely injured that it died yesterday. One wheel of the car took the flesh from the knee to the hip of one leg.

FIRST-STREET, BROOKLYN.—An application will be made to the next Legislature to extend First-street, Brooklyn, through Greenwood Cemetery, to the City line.

FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—Early yesterday morning a fire broke out in a frame dwelling in Pacific-street, near Washington-avenue, damaging the premises to the extent of $200.

THE POOR.—Five hundred dollars was contributed by the congregation worshiping in the Second-street Church, Brooklyn, on Sunday last, for the relief of the poor connected with the Church.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

FALSE INVOICES.

Victor Fleury was put on trial this morning, charged with attempting to pass false invoices through the Custom-House. The original invoice was not produced, and the Government failed to supply secondary evidence of it, so that under the direction of the Court the Jury found a verdict of Not Guilty without leaving their seats.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—Nov. 23.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell, Clerks and Vedder.

THE WILL OF JAMES DE LAZ.

Benoit J. Cazelle, appellant, vs. John F. Ferrie, respondent.—This long contested and interesting case came up on an appeal from the Surrogate's decision, that letters of administration should issue to John F. Ferrie, as next of kin to the deceased, thus recognizing his (Ferrie's) legitimacy.

A brief sketch of the facts in the case is interesting. In December, 1834, James De Laz, a widower and resident of this City, died, intestate, leaving John F. Ferrie, his nephew, the son of his sister, a resident of Cincinnati. The personal estate of the deceased, amassed by her while trading in this City, as a femme sole, amounted to $72,000, and as none of her kin resided in New-York, the Surrogate granted letters of collection of her estate to Peter S. Sweeney, the Public Administrator. On the 11th of December, 1854, Ferrie filed his petition with the Surrogate of this County, demanding letters of administration on the estate of his mother, as her next of kin and sole heir, and the Public Administrator filed an answer, whereby he put that question at issue.

On the 16th of December, 1854, the Public Administrator filed his petition in the Surrogate's Court, asking for full letters of administration, and the cause was heard before the Surrogate shortly afterwards on the petition of Ferrie and the answer of the Public Administrator, Mr. Sweeney appearing in person, and Messrs. Jay and Whitehead appearing for the French Consul, as the representative of such parties in the French Empire as might be interested in the estate. The proof shows that Ferrie is the son of deceased, but it was and still is claimed that he was not the legitimate son, and therefore under the laws of this State, in force at the death of the intestate, was not next of kin to law, and could not inherit the estate, but that the personal property passed to distant collateral relations to the fifth degree to his mother, of whom the appellant is one, and the representative of all. Much testimony was introduced before the Surrogate on the first hearing, but to remove all doubts as to the legitimacy or illegitimacy of Ferrie, the Surrogate issued a commission for the purpose of instituting further inquiries in the French Empire, and postponed his decision till after the report of that Commission, which consisted of Geo. C. Crum and Charles E. Whitehead. This Commission returned and reported considerable testimony. The Surrogate shortly afterwards rendered his decision in favor of Ferrie.

The cause was argued on final hearing in January, 1856.

The case now is to be argued by Messrs. Whitehead and Jay for the appellant, and Mr. Ball for the respondent.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—Nov. 24.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.

MISNOMER.

George W. Morgan vs. Thomas Norton.—The plaintiff should cause additional bail to be given on the appeal and to justify on notice; also security to be given for the costs in all the suits in the Supreme Court, and should pay ten dollars, the costs of this motion, as condition on which the amendments should be made.

THE INJUNCTION AGAINST THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

Philip McDermott, on behalf of himself and others, vs. The Board of Metropolitan Police Commissioners.—It was reported in yesterday's Times that an injunction was served on the Board restraining them from appointing more patrolmen. The plaintiff claims that he is owner of real estate, and is taxed for the maintenance of the City government; that he is a member of the old Police, and has never been dismissed on any written charge, and is entitled to display as such; that the Board of Police have no authority to appoint for the City more patrolmen than is provided by the act of the Legislature, including those who were members of the Police on the 15th of April, 1857, and who have not since that time been legally removed, and he prays that the defendants be restrained from appointing or recognizing any member of the Police other than those who were members of that force on the 15th day of April last.

Judge Davies granted the following injunction, a copy of which was served on the Police Commissioners while the Board was in session in the afternoon.

It appearing satisfactory to me by the affidavit of Philip McDermott the plaintiff, that sufficient grounds for an order of injunction exist. I do hereby order that the defendants show cause before me at the Chambers of the Justices of the Supreme Court, in the City of New-York, on the 26th day of November, 1857, at 11 A. M., why a perpetual injunction should not be granted restraining the said defendants from appointing or recognizing any members of the Police of the City of New-York other than those who were members of the Police of said City on the 15th day of April, 1857; and in the meantime, I do hereby order that the defendants absolutely refrain from appointing any new members of the Police of the City of New-York, other than those who were members of the Police of said City on the 15th day of April, 1857, until the hearing on this order to show cause, and until the further order of this Court; and, in case of disobedience to this order, you will be liable therefor to the punishment prescribed by law.

HENRY E. DAVIES.

Before Hon. Justice Ketchum.

Samuel R. Jacks vs. Abraham Marshall et als.—The order will be that the answer will be deemed the answer in the cause, upon the defendant's attorney giving a written stipulation within two days to strike out the defence of usury. Otherwise an order to be entered denying the motion. Seven dollars costs allowed of opposing this motion in any event.

The Act Relative to Civil Justices and their Clerks alleged to be Unconstitutional.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—General Term.

James Green vs. The Mayor, &c., of New-York.—Plaintiff is the Justice of the First District Court, in this City, and sues to recover $212 96, alleged to be due to him for salary, as such Justice, for the month of April, 1857. It seems that up to the 13th of April, 1857, the salary of each Justice of the District Court was $2,000 per annum; that on that day the Legislature passed the District Court Act which provides that the Justices of the District Courts shall receive the same compensation as the Justices of the Marine Court, and that the latter receive $3,000 per annum. The above amount is partially made up at the rate of $2,000 per annum, and partially at the rate of $2,000 per annum. The defendants aver in their answer that they are prohibited by their Charter from borrowing any money, except in anticipation of their annual revenue, unless authorized by a special act of the Legislature; that prior to the passage of the act increasing the salaries of the Justices of the District Court, the Comptroller of the defendants was required by law submitted a detailed estimate of the probable amount of tax which would be required for the year 1857, to the Common Council. That in that estimate the salaries of the Justices of the District Courts were estimated at $2,000 per annum. That the aggregate of all the salaries payable out of the City Treasury as then existing, was $412,300; that the Common Council passed an ordinance appropriating that amount for salaries, and that the annual tax bill, passed March 5, 1857, only authorized the Supervisors to receive $412,300 for salaries of officers in the City and County, and prohibited the defendants from appropriating any of the amounts by such bill, authorized to be raised, to augmenting officers then in each bill authorized and appropriated. That the act of April 13 last, notwithstanding the balance of the Justices aforesaid, gave to the Common Council no power to raise an amount sufficient to defray the increase. That in consequence of these facts the defendants have no money to pay the plaintiff the increase in his salary. The defendants aver and insist that the plaintiff is entitled to take judgment for $168 67, being one month's salary, at the rate of $2,000 per annum. To this answer the plaintiff demurs. It was contended on the part of the plaintiff that the defendants were bound to provide means to defray the increase in the salaries.

For the defendants it was urged that their charter prohibited them from borrowing any money to meet this increased expense, that the last bill only gave the Supervisors power to raise by tax $412,300 for salaries, that that amount had been appropriated before the plaintiff's salary was increased to pay the salaries of other officers and of the Justices of these Courts at the rates then allowed them by law, and that the defendants being the mere creatures of their charter had no power at present to pay the plaintiff, that there was no way in which they could raise the money. It was admitted that the act of April 13, 1857, was unconstitutional and void, because it contravened the provisions of the Constitution of the State, which provides that no law shall be passed which shall embrace more than one subject, and that the subject should be expressed in the title. The question was whether the plaintiff could be nonsuited on either side of the demurrer. Alderman FOX spoke in opposition. The motion was finally adopted.

REMOVAL OF STEAMBOAT LANDINGS.

Alderman WILSON offered the following:

Whereas, There is a great diversity of opinion as to the powers and authority of the Common Council in the matter of removing the landing places of steamboats, the consideration of which is of the highest importance to the public interest, and which interest is in my opinion of the gravest character; therefore

Resolved, That the Counsel to the Corporation be requested to report to this Board what is the law of what has been and authority vested in the Common Council in the matter of the report of the Special Committee in the landing of the Sound and North River steamboats.

Alderman SPIRES moved that the resolution lie upon the table. Carried.

THE FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

Alderman McGUINNESS moved to take from the table the report of the Finance Committee for the reorganization of the Finance Department. The motion being carried, the Clerk proceeded to read the report, when Alderman McGUINNESS asked that the reading should be suspended, as there were only twelve members present.

Alderman TUCKER moved, that the report be again laid on the table. Lost.

Alderman McGUINNESS moved that the report should be made the subject of a special order at the next meeting of the Board.

Alderman TUCKER moved that all resolutions relating to the grading and regulating of Ninth-avenue be taken up and acted upon. If the Board were sincere in their desire to relieve the poor people out of employment, they would at once proceed in the matter by acting on such resolutions. The grading of the Ninth-avenue, blasting rocks, &c., could as well be done in Winter as Summer, and would be the means of relieving a large number of families now in distress.

Alderman OWENS hoped the resolution would be adopted, as it would give the Board the power to employ from 3,000 to 4,000 men, instead of only 1,000 men, whom they now employed in the Central Park.

The Chairman said he found that the original papers were lost, in the possession of the Board, and therefore the resolution could not be acted upon.

The Board then adjourned to Friday.

MARRIED AT THE CITY HALL.—PATRICK MCGOGAN and MARY DOYLE presented themselves to Alderman BARWIS on Monday, at the City Hall, and requested to be joined in holy matrimony. The Alderman executed the job, and the Clerk made out a certificate which Pat took with a bow and was about making off, when he was politely informed that he must pay 50 cents for the writing. "Ooh, but ain't I married?" inquired Pat. Certainly, said the Clerk. "Well, by the hole of my coat, then, that's all I want," said Pat; and he walked off with his MARY, fully satisfied,—but the clerk wasn't.

BOY RUN OVER AND KILLED BY AN OMNIBUS.—On Monday afternoon a boy, five years of age, was run over by an omnibus in the Bowery, near Houston-street, and instantly killed. Officer BARNS, of the Tenth Ward, arrested the driver Gaspar S. BENJAMIN, who was committed to await the investigation by the Coroner. The name of the boy is unknown. The body was taken to No. 61 Chrystie-street, where an inquest would be held.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—DANIEL M. QUINN, residing at No. 49 Chatham-street, was induced Saturday night by CATHARINE WILLIAMS, a characterless girl, to accompany her to her lodgings, No. 15 City Hall-place, and remain over night. On waking up yesterday morning, his companion was missing, and his wallet containing $30. The girl was subsequently arrested and committed by Justice OSBORN for examination. None of the missing money recovered.

POLITICAL.—The tax-payers of the Sixteenth Ward have nominated Dr. JAMES W. RAMSEY for Alderman. The Republicans and Americans have adopted the same candidate. The following have been nominated for School officers in the Ward by the United Americans and Republicans: ISAAC WM. SMITH, Commissioner; JOHN DELAMATER, GEORGE W. BROWN, M. ROSS and E. H. COMSTOCK for Trustees; and JOHN W. HOFFMANN for Inspector. For Police Justice, JOHN QUACKENBUSH has been nominated. The above constitute the Tiemann ticket in the Sixteenth Ward.

SWINDLER.—Officer WM. H. LOWERY, of the Recorder's Office, yesterday, received a letter from Mr. H. TIMANY, of Bond's village, Mass., calling attention to the lottery swindles in New-York, and offering to produce testimony against certain dealers. Mr. TIMANY compliments the officer for his efficient aid in recovering money from California ticket swindlers, and makes allusion to the last case of this kind published in the Times. The letter has been laid before the General Superintendent of Police.

FIRE IN BROADWAY.—At 7 yesterday morning a slight fire occurred in the dwelling-house No. 718 Broadway, occupied by WM. SCANE. A careless servant-girl was opening the parlor shutters with a lighted candle in her hand, when the curtains took fire, causing damage to the carpet and furniture of about $100, insured in the Aetna Insurance Company.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—CATHARINE DEFFERY, aged about [illegible] years, a native of the Highlands of Scotland, residing at No. [illegible] Mercer-street, attempted in the night to commit suicide by hanging herself with her garter to one of the bars of her cell door. Officer WATSON fortunately discovered her and cut her down in time to save her life.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets.....Carefully reported for the New-York Times.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, Nov. 24—6 P. M.

RECEIPTS OF PRODUCE.—Since noon yesterday, 14,771 bbls. Flour, 47,600 bush. and 180 bags Wheat, 4,000 bush. Corn, 2,263 bush. Corn, meal, Barley, 251 bags Malt, 648 packages Provisions, 722 bbls. Whisky, and 33 bbls. Ashes.

ASHES—Are in demand, at steady rates. Pearls, $6 50; Pots, $7 @ 100 lbs.

BREADSTUFFS—The demand is fair, and prices are quoted unchanged, for both foreign and domestic.

COFFEE—Pending the auction sale, announced for to-morrow, (Wednesday,) Rio is neglected. St. Domingo is in better request, with sales reported of 2,000 bags, including 600 for export at 9¾c., cash, and 2,000 to the trade at 9c., cash, ⅌ lb. Teas selling very little in first hands—show a decline in prices. We quote, Java, 10½@11c.; Mocha, 10½@12c.; Rio, 8c.@11½c.; St. Domingo, 9¾c.; Native Ceylon, 13c. cash, and Laguayra at 11¾c.@12c. COPPER—The demand is limited, but prices show no change. We quote, Pig, [illegible]; Bar, [illegible]; do., Sheet, [illegible]; Old, [illegible]; American Ingot, [illegible]; Bolts, [illegible] and Bottoms, [illegible].

COTTON—Is quite dull, and quoted decidedly lower, viz.: [illegible] for Middling Fairlands, [illegible] for do. Orleans, and proportionately lower for other grades ⅌ lb. The week's receipts are very light, but factors are not disposed to receive it. The demand is extremely slack.

FEATHERS—Live Geese, 40c.@45c., cash, ⅌ lb.

FISH—The market is quiet, and prices have varied, who manifest very little disposition to purchase any more than is actually required.

FREIGHTS—Are very dull, and we note important change to notice in the market for Grain and Western Flour. The demand is rather more active, and several heavy ships are now in port, which are being dispatched over, and no difficulty in getting all that they need at yesterday's reduced currency, and in some instances sales have been effected at even lower rates. The limited receipts help to strengthen the confidence of factors. We note sales: 7,000 bbls. Cotton, to good Superfine State.....[illegible]
Extra State.....[illegible]
Superfine Indiana and Michigan.....[illegible]
Superfine Ohio.....[illegible]
Fancy Ohio.....[illegible]

HAY—The movements in Hay have been quite vigorous during the past week. The receipts and sales have been on an extensive scale, and prices have exhibited more firmness and buoyancy. Inland navigation must be suspended shortly, and the farmers of the interior will not be able to send their hay to market as freely as they can at the present time. This prospect favors the interests of sellers, who are less eager in endeavoring to secure customers at previailing rates, as they anticipate an improvement in prices when the receipts shall have been diminished by the usual Winter impediments. We quote Bale Hay at from 40c.@60c. for inferior to strictly prime ⅌ 100 lbs. Loose at from 60c.@94c. ⅌ 100 lbs., and Salt Hay at from 30c.@65½c. ⅌ 100 lbs. Straw continues scarce and in request at our quotations; Loose 67½c. ⅌ 100 lbs., and bundle at $2 50@$4 25 ⅌ 100 sheaves. In Boston, during the week ending Nov. 23, Hay was dull and prices declined to $1[illegible]@$12 50, cash, ⅌ ton, for Eastern. In Baltimore, during the week ending Nov. 23, Hay was scarce and was selling at $16@$18 ⅌ ton for bale, and $13@$15 for loose. Straw commanded $17 ⅌ ton Rye, and $[illegible]@$18 for Wheat. In Charleston, during the week ending Nov. 21, Hay was firm, with sales reported of 1,100 Northern, at 80c., and 800 bales Eastern, at 95c. ⅌ 100 lbs. In Savannah, during the week ending Nov. 21, one cargo of Northern arrived, but being held at a price which could not be obtained, it was put in store. No arrivals of Eastern, and no sales from wharf. Hay was selling from store at $1 25@$1 37½c. Eastern, and $1 [illegible] Northern. In Mobile, during the week ending Nov. 17, the Hay market was very dull, two of three cargoes remaining in the bay unsold. The retail price was $1 [illegible]@$1 25 ⅌ cwt.

IRON—No sales, and no alterations in prices, of any consequence, have transpired to-day.

LEAD—Appears quiet, parties disagreeing about prices.

LEATHER—The demand is generally reviving, and Sole is quoted pretty firm at about previous figures.

LUMBER—The Savannah Republican, of Nov. 21, says: "A few orders for Lumber were received this week, which has produced some inquiry, but we hear of no transaction, except for a cargo, for Tobago, at a price which did not transpire, probably within the limits of our quotations. The quote Rafts and Scow $16; Rough Edge $12@$14. There has been no improvement in the receipts of Timber. Cutters do not seem satisfied with the price, and the limited demand has prevented any advance. There are two ships now loading for Liverpool, which are the first orders for foreign account filled here this season. We quote shipping Timber at $8@$12. The exports of Timber and Lumber for the week have been [illegible]."

LIME—Rockland's [illegible] Lime, cash, $1 [illegible] ⅌ bbl.

MOLASSES—The market is very quiet, and prices are somewhat unsettled.

OILS—Whale and Sperm are inactive in this city, and prices are nominally the same. The New-Bedford Mercury says the recent sales of Sperm Oil in that market, for export, amount to 3,[illegible] bbls., at $1 [illegible] gallon, an unprecedentedly low

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We have received and publish in another part of this morning's impression, a brief telegraphic summary of four days later news from Europe. The Vanderbilt, from Southampton on the 14th inst., passed Cape Race on Sunday afternoon, bearing duplicate intelligence of great importance. The severe monetary pressure in Great Britain had ended in a panic. On the 12th inst., the Government suspended the Charter Act of the Bank of England, and authorized the issue of notes of any amount on approved securities. This immediately restored confidence. A large number of additional failures is reported. Consols had declined considerably, but closed on the 13th with increased steadiness. The Bank of France had reduced its rate of discount on 90 days bills to [illegible] per cent. Cotton has largely declined.

There came never before such a crowd of people to and around the Academy of Music as gathered last night to ratify the nomination of DANIEL F. TIEMANN as the Anti-Wood candidate for the Mayoralty of this city. Thousands went away unable to get within the outer doors. Still, enough remained to fill the space between Union Square and Third Avenue, and the outside meetings that were organized were immense jams of themselves. Mr. TIEMANN presided inside of the Academy. Speeches were made by Hon. JOHN MCKEON, Hon. DAVID B. OGDEN, Ex-Senator FRANCIS KERNAN, Hon. WILLIAM WHITING, Wm. H. FAY and others. The enthusiasm was immense. An abbreviated bill was then taken up at a very late hour.

Further particulars of the burning of the Roanoke, on the Mississippi, have reached us. She had 175 passengers on board, including a large number on deck, and the fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary among the latter. The flames were blazing high at the time, and [illegible] was seen crowded in frenzy, while [illegible] ran ashore, where she burned to the water's edge. The loss of life is estimated at 75 persons, of whom probably the greater portion perished through the manner of their death [illegible] stated. A partial list of those known to have been lost is given under our telegraphic head.

The funeral of Rear-Admiral LEWIS WARRINGTON and Lieut. Wm. A. WASHINGTON SLOCUM, who were killed in a duel with an iron ball by HENRY WALLOT, of Fort Jefferson, Suffolk County, L. I., took place on Monday at 1 P. M. The body of Mr. WALLOT was removed from the township for interment. Many singular stories are afloat in the village in connection with the murder. The details of the murder evince in Mr. WALLOT a skillful and fearless marksman. It appears, however, that it was a great deal to worship him. He did not live happily with his wife and family.

The Coroner's investigation in the case of the Water-street dance-house murders, which was to have been resumed yesterday morning, was postponed to Friday, so that additional witnesses may be obtained. Captain WALLING, of the Fourth Ward, stated that he had been to Brooklyn among the Spanish convicts and marines, temporarily residing there, and obtained information which led him to believe that three men, in the habit of visiting the dance-house where the murder was committed were secreted in the house of the Spanish Consul in this City. The Coroner directed the Captain to search, to-day, the house of the Spanish Consul. A letter has been written, by the Coroner, to the Mayor, asking him to offer a reward for the arrest of the murderers. A sailor named JOHN BARQUER was arrested, late last night, on suspicion of being one of the parties who could identify the murderers of Mr. VINCENT at No. 15 North William-street. Several witnesses testify to his saying that he was in Mr. VINCENT's saloon a few minutes previous to the murder. The prisoner was locked up in the Tombs.

The remains of General WOLFE were brought under escort from Greenwood Cemetery, yesterday afternoon, and deposited in the Governor's Room in the City Hall. A large crowd assembled in the Park to see the coffin removed from the hearse.

The Board of Governors assembled on Tuesday. A communication from the Common Council was received and read respecting the condition of the out-door poor, and suggesting that the Governors appoint visitors to investigate their condition. Governor DUANE moved its reference to the Committee on Out-Door Poor. Governor TOWNSEND moved that it be placed on file, commenting very strongly, on the action of the Common Council. Governor FLEMMING seconded that motion, contending that the communication was respectful and entitled to consideration. It was not "humbug," as had been asserted by Governor MALONEY, and had no relation to the forthcoming election. Referred to Committee on Out-Door Poor. A letter from E. H. PEARSON was received complaining of the alleged cruelty and injustice of the Common Council, and asking for admission to the almshouse. Governor MALONEY attempted a jocular statement, but was instantly checked by Governor SMITH. The communication had been forwarded in good faith. The President observed that the petitioner had some weak points, but he had received, in all conscience, kicks and cuffs enough. Ultimately the matter was referred to the Committee on Out-Door Poor, the President assuring Governor MALONEY that he had no doubt there was an entire absence of all attempt at fun on the part of Mr. PEARSON. Much miscellaneous business was transacted. The question of a Female Penitentiary was agitated on motion of the President.

At the meeting of the Board of Central Park Commissioners held at 1 o'clock yesterday, a communication was read from the Superintendent of the Park, in which he gives an account of the demonstrations of those who have demanded labor at the Park during the past week, and expresses a determination to employ only industrious men, and eradicate from their minds at least the idea that the Park was a charitable institution. The hours for labor on the Park will be hereafter from 7 A. M. to 5 P. M., with half an hour for dinner in the middle of the day.

The unemployed met at Tompkins square to the number of three or four hundred, yesterday morning, and appointed a Committee of two to call once more—final and last call—upon the Commissioners of the Central Park. They then proceeded to the City Hall. The Committee had an interview with the Commissioners in the afternoon, [illegible] to receive a written statement [illegible] to-day and is ready to the [illegible] Office, to prevent accidents.

[illegible] was tried yesterday in the United States District Court, on a charge of attempting to pass through the Custom-House some [illegible] of leather. The Government failed to make out a case against him and he was acquitted by direction of the Court.

Mr. ARTHUR CONSTANT lectures on the Harp, at the Conservatoire de la Harpe, No. 48 West Twenty-fourth-street, last evening, was attended by a select audience, who manifested much interest and pleasure in the instructions and examples which he gave them.

The lecture-room of the Historical Society was crowded last night, on occasion of the delivery of a very interesting discourse, by Dr. JOHN W. FRANCIS, for the benefit of the contingent fund of the Society, on "The Church, the Drama, and the Opera in New-York." A life-long intercourse with the celebrities of the last half century, especially with those of European reputation who have visited this country, enables the Doctor to give some highly interesting sketches and personal reminiscences, which were received with very great attention and evident pleasure.

Rev. Dr. OSMON delivered an address last night, before the Young Men's Christian Union, at Clinton Hall, on "Christianity, with reference to Labor and the Poor." It was well received, and replete with obvious and judicious suggestions at this juncture.

Out of 115 passengers in the bark Sarah from Hamburg, arrived at Quarantine yesterday, 41 died on the passage. The sick were landed at Quarantine. Eight passengers on board the Tyrsko, from Bremen, arrived at this port last week, died of cholera on the voyage, and several were taken to the hospital when she reached port.

The General Produce Markets, yesterday, exhibited increased depression in prices of the leading kinds of Breadstuffs, though a somewhat livelier demand prevailed, chiefly for the home trade. Provisions were heavy and declining. Cotton was quoted down to 11c.@11½c. ⅌ lb., for Middlings, with few buyers, despite the scarcity of supplies. Coffee was generally quiet, with 110,819 bags remaining in first hands. Nearly all the St. Domingo available was purchased at 8½c.@9c. cash, ⅌ lb. Sugars were pretty active, at the previously reduced quotations. Freights were dull, and rates were falling.

Important Foreign News—Suspension of the Bank of England.

The yacht of the Associated Press of this City has again done this community the good service of anticipating the arrival of very important commercial news by a steamer from Europe. The Vanderbilt, due at this port in all the course of the next forty-eight hours, sends us the intelligence of the suspension of the Charter of the Bank of England by the Government so far as to meet the pressing demands of the commerce of the country by an unlimited issue of notes. This measure, which had been urged upon the Government before the sailing of the Atlantic, seems to have been immediately brought about by a wide-spread commercial panic overrunning the Kingdom so rapidly, and overthrowing so thoroughly the self-command of the British public, as to stultify in no inconsiderable degree the complacent comments which our transatlantic cousins allowed themselves to make upon the cause of our own financial difficulties. The discounting-houses throughout the country took alarm rather than assurance from the action of the Bank, and absolutely refused to extend any accommodation to their customers. Trade, of course, threatened to stagnate, and failures multiplied with every hour. The pressure from France must also have been very severe, it having been loudly proclaimed in Paris on the 10th instant that nothing could relieve the obstruction of commerce throughout the Empire, and arrest the anticipated "train of gold" to America, but the giving of a forced currency to the notes of the Bank of France, which step must first be taken by the Bank of England before it could become practicable and safe on the other side of the Channel. Under these combined influences, the English Government gave way, and on the morning of the 12th a Treasury letter was issued to meet the contingency hinted at by the London Times on the 10th, and to inflict a lesson on those who had "fed the panic by providing their selves with superfluous specie at the enhanced rate" which the Bank had applied to the financial interest of the whole nation. The effect of this measure was instantaneous. "Extravagant joy," we are told, was manifested all over the Kingdom, and the "panic" was begining to subside, just as the similar panic of September subsided in Wall-street on the suspension of our own Banks. Great hopes were felt, we are also informed, that the news of this important turn in affairs might precede the receipt on this side of the intelligence brought by the Atlantic. It was expected, of course, that the tidings of the unprecedented advance of the rate of discount by the Bank of England would produce in America effects analogous to those which followed it in England, and give rise to a renewal of the American embarrassments, only to be pacified by the assurance of the measures of relief subsequently taken. These expectations have been happily falsified by the history of the last twenty-four hours, and the influence of the suspension in England upon our own markets will respond, we are convinced, to its results at home in demonstrating the essentially causeless and mercurial character of the difficulties out of which the provocation of the measure arose.

Once more we are driven to observe upon the gravity of the interests compromised by the failure of the Telegraphic Expedition of August last. Had the Government of the Bank of England been put into immediate communication with the American department of that world of commerce for which, in the last resort, it acts, the steps which led to the excitements of the first week of November would never have been taken. The recent history of financial affairs has, indeed, proved that the Atlantic Telegraph has become rather a necessity than a convenience of the times. It has proved, too, that no community escapes the contagion of the modern atmosphere, and that the most accurately-adjusted machinery that can be devised for the conduct of the business of the world is not safe from the derangements of sudden passion, and the perturbations of unreasoning alarm. The enforced action of the English Treasury will doubtless be followed by a crusade upon the Bank Charter. Parliament was to meet at once, and indications were given some time since of an intended onslaught upon that organic act. For the interest of the financial world, it is to be hoped that these attacks may result in nothing more important than the modification of a system which has been abundantly tried and up to this time has not been found wanting. We on this side do not desire the example of an impetuous interference by a National Legislature to correct in the forms of law an evil which originated pretty clearly in causes outside of those forms, and independent of any coercive or ameliorative power which Statutes or Charters can be lodged in statutes and enactments, in Bank Governors, or Lords of the Treasury.

THE WOOD MEETING.—We have already noticed the curious fact that the self-styled "Democratic" advocates of Mayor Wood's reelection were forced to go out of the City in order to find Democrats of any character or influence to favor their movement. A perusal of the letters received from these gentlemen reveals another very curious fact, namely, that their cooperation had to be sought under false pretences. Gov. WISE, for example, acknowledges the receipt of the invitation to join in their "rejoicing over the recent Democratic victory." O. J. LAMBERT, of Penn., declines to take any part in the local politics of the City, but so far as national politics are concerned, expresses his sympathy. Hon. J. C. WARNER thinks the Democrats have a right to be jubilant "over the late election." And when they did succeed in getting a reply from a City Democrat, as in the case of Mr. SUTTON, they were told in very distinct and unmistakable terms, that so far from considering Mr. Wood's success essential to the Democratic cause, he had proved himself the most bitter enemy of the Democratic party.

The Pacification of India.

Not the reconquest, but the pacification of India, is the serious task now imposed upon England by the handful of heroic Englishmen who, in the space of a little more than four months, have succeeded in overthrowing the formidable array of a revolted army, and in crushing the combinations of a fanatical conspiracy.

Foreign nations, which have looked with anxious sympathy upon the progress of this fearful contest which has been so rapidly and so gloriously concluded, will henceforth watch with equal attention and with equal interest the course to be pursued by the victorious British in restoring the stable foundations of public order in India; and it is to be earnestly hoped that the voice of the civilized world, which has been raised with such remarkable unanimity, from Russia to America, in denunciation of those disloyalties to human nature by which the mutineers of Bengal called their outbreak from the English authority, and in admiration of the invincible endurance, and the irresistible gallantry of the Anglo-Indian battalions, may find no reason for applauding, with a less harmonious energy, the efforts of England to quiet disturbance, and to reestablish industry throughout her Eastern dominions.

With the fall of Delhi,—the relief of Lucknow and Agra,—the dispersion of the revolting Sepoys from every point at which they have clustered for war, and the infliction of signal punishment upon the villains most conspicuous in the perpetration of those atrocities at which the blood, not of England alone, but of Europe and America, still curdles with horror and burns with indignation—the era of statesmanship in India should return, and arms give place to law again. From the beginning it has been clearest to those who best knew the facts of the case, that these Indian mutinies meant mutiny and not revolution, that they implicated a military organization created by England herself, and not the mighty masses of the Hindoo population. And already our English mails begin to give us glimpses of noble and generous deeds done by natives of every rank, which at once confirm the conviction that India has not, as India, risen against her foreign rulers, and vindicate the Hindoo race from the infamy invited by the acts of the Mussulman leaders of the revolt, and of the rabble unhoused by their hands. Here from the beginning, the princely SCINDIA has faced the insurrection within his own dominions, boldly checking with hasty and undisciplined levies the threatening advance of the Gwalior Contingent—how the royal HOLKAR silenced the cries for blood of his mutinous troops by declaring that "the murder of women and children made no part of any religion"—how all the native chiefs and rulers of the States on the hither side of the Sutlej held open the roads from the Punjab upon Delhi to the English forces and their allies, and sent their own bayonets to the relief of the army besieging the revolted capital—all these things we have heard familiarly in the public records of the Indian conflict. But the facts which are reaching us now have a deeper and wider significance. Now it is the story of a Hindoo Rajah rescuing the lives of a few English fugitives at an obscure village, in open contempt of threats against his life, and with the certainty that nothing but the success of his generous interposition could ever make known the existence of such an opportunity. Now it is a native gentleman of Oude who remembers that in days long past the life of his father had been protected by a European soldier, and acquits the debt by opening the gates of his little domestic fortress to all the English in his vicinity; and now a Mussulman trooper who rides away from his regiment to protect two helpless English ladies, and carrying his own life in his hand, escorts them for two days and nights to a place of safety, refusing all offers of recompense, and asking only that his name might be good among Christ's people." There are stories of Brahmins sheltering officers and soldiers in their flight—of simple villagers growing wise and valiant in succor, whereof and defend trembling women and children for weeks at a time—of native servants becoming soldiers in the hour of their masters' sorest need.

There is a vast and precious significance in all these incidents which must not be overlooked, and which we believe will not be overlooked, by England in the work of pacification now before her. The valor by which India was won has rescued India. But something more than valor will be needed either to keep India at all, or to make India worth the keeping. And this more important and efficacious something must be sought for quite outside of those Parliamentary Reforms in the system of Government which the English Press is even now beginning to discuss. No possible exposure of defects in the Company's policy, no possible excoriation of incompetent Crown Officials can turn the edge of that cosmopolitan criticism which is provoked by the failure of England after a century of dominion so to amalgamate her interests with those of her subsidized subjects as to make the revolt of a whole army simply impossible. As we have said from the beginning, so now we repeat, that the radical solution of the English race with the races of Hindostan are at fault in this matter, and that a mightier agency than the magic of Blue Books and Acts of Parliament must be employed to assure the Future, and atone for the Past.

The occupation of India by the English, as a historical fact, is to be paralleled only in the annals of antiquity by the conquests of Rome, and in modern times by the colonization of Spain in the New World, and of Mantchouria in Asia. But it is in the grandeur of the scale upon which these events are cast, alone, that their resemblance to each other must be sought.

Rome established herself in the empires which she overran by the power of an armed civilization. Gaul, Britain, Asia Minor, Egypt, Spain, became Roman; the laws, the manners, the tastes of Rome, overcast the whole temper of those provincial nationalities. Spain subdued Mexico and Peru by an armed conversion. The subjects of the Aztec Emperors and of the Incas passed under the yoke of the Papacy before they reached that condition of abject acquiescence from which it would seem that nothing but an intestine quarrel among their superiors could ever awaken them. The Tartar conquerors of China fastened themselves upon their colossal prize by a still different process. They became themselves Chinese as the Normans became Englishmen and Russians, Sicilians and Frenchmen.

None of these combinations or changes have taken place in India. A century has not sufficed to create an Anglo-Indian population, to Anglicize the Hindoos, or to Brahmanize the Englishmen. England still stands upon rather than within her Indian dominion; and it is all true if this day as it was in the time of the apostolic Bishop Heber, that the influence of the English resident upon the Hindoo population still awakens more of repugnance and resistance than of attraction and assimilation. The good prelate divided the native population into three ranks, on the basis of their moral excellence, giving the first place to those who had never come into contact with the English, the second to those who simply met the English in the common intercourse of life, and the third to those who were engaged in the service, and dependent on the authority of the English. We fear that the episcopal summary holds as good now as when it was first made. Neither by conversion nor colonization has the English genius been able to impress itself upon the land. In the work of conversion India offers difficulties which Christianity has nowhere else encountered. For a pantheistic people absorbs all creeds and digests all differences of dogma with a frightful facility. The miracles of the Apostolic age and the asceticism of missionary life make but a slight impression on people familiar with the transmogrifications of Brahma and accustomed to the self-inflicted tortures of hundreds of devotees. The only point at which the Hindoo becomes intolerant and offers a resistance available for argument, is just the point at which argument is least efficacious. His religion permeates his life, and he is a bigot only in his breeding. The European shocks his taste, his instincts, his decency at every turn. An English ball enlivened by the presence of unveiled ladies, an English dinner fortified by the flesh of sacred beeves, horrify him as much as a drunken orgie in Trinity Church, or a banquet of cannibals at the City Hall would disgust the citizens of New-York. It is not, therefore, surprising that neither the Catholic nor the Protestant should have much distributed the pathway supremacy in India of the Brahminical faith. Gorgeous Goa, and austere Tranquebar have alike demonstrated their diverse lights in vain.

Colonization, that other great chemical force, has never been fairly tried. The "Company" for years succeeded in making it impossible; they still succeed in making it undesirable. While the Government insists upon a tax of 15 per cent. upon the land revenue, it is clear that little inducement can be held out in India to the English emigrant and settler.

The task then of pacification and occupation still waits to be done by England in India. A great, a difficult, a questionable task it is, and the interests of mankind demand that it shall not be lightly undertaken nor thoughtlessly prosecuted.

The Anti-Wood Meeting.

The meeting held at, and around, the Academy of Music last evening, of those opposed to the reelection of FERNANDO WOOD, was one of the largest popular gatherings this City has ever witnessed. We are not in the habit of dealing in terms of extravagance and exaggeration, when speaking of public convocations of this sort, and have always endeavored neither to underrate the gatherings of opponents, nor to overrate those of persons with whose views or purposes we might happen to agree. Yet we feel that we risk nothing in saying that two buildings as large as the Academy would not have held the multitude who assembled last night to protest against the election of Mayor Wood.

The proceedings explained a phenomenon which we noticed yesterday—namely, the absence from the Wood meeting, held at Tammany Hall on Monday evening, of all the leading and influential Democrats of the City. It appeared last night that they are, almost without exception, earnest and resolute opponents of Mr. Wood's election, and equally resolute in their support of his Democratic competitor, Mr. TIEMANN. The principal speech of the evening was made by Hon. JOHN MCKEON, who is District-Attorney under President BUCHANAN for this District; and he was followed by Hon. D. E. SICKLES—one of the ablest members of the Democratic Congressional Delegation, and the confidential friend of the Democratic President. JOHN VAN BUREN sent a letter expressing his thorough sympathy with the objects of the meeting, and the presiding officer was Hon. WM. F. HAVEMEYER, who was elected Mayor of the City by Democratic votes, and has from that day to this enjoyed the fullest confidence of the entire Democratic Party. In the face of such indications as these, it is the height of absurdity to pretend that Mr. Wood is regarded by the Democrats of this City as their candidate and representative, or that they consider his success essential to the reputation or future prosperity of the Democratic Party.

We asked yesterday special consideration for the resolutions and address of the Wood meeting. We do the same now for the Anti-Wood gathering, which will be found in another column. They are the exact opposite of the others. They state clearly, strongly and in unmistakable terms the many and weighty reasons why FERNANDO WOOD should not continue longer to be the Chief Executive of a City which he has done so much to injure and degrade. They discard and ignore all party considerations and accept the issue which Mr. Wood himself has tendered,—that of his personal fitness for the office he has filled for the past three years.

This meeting, with its proceedings, was a strong and effective demonstration of the deep interest which the contest has aroused, and of the fixed determination of the most intelligent and influential portion of our citizens to relieve themselves from the benumbed rule from which the character and interests of this great City have suffered so much already.

The City Election—Local Interests and Party Politics.

Mayor WOOD's supporters do not show as much courage as he does. With characteristic self-confidence the Mayor himself declares his desire to make the contest purely personal in its character. He proclaims his readiness to meet all his accusers face to face; promises at some future day to convince the public of the purity, the consistency, the vigorous integrity, the public spirit and the preeminent success and brilliancy of his Administration; and with a degree of assurance that approaches the sublime, declares that he can triumph over all the influences that can be brought to bear against him, by the force of personal character alone. His followers have less faith in his personal virtues. With more prudence, they rather shirk the issue as thus presented,—and endeavor to place the contest upon party grounds. They insist with emphasis and fervor, that Mayor WOOD, as the regular nominee of the Democratic Party, must receive the support of every member of that party,—that its honor and welfare are involved in his success, and that his defeat would be a serious blow to its supremacy. It is upon this that they rely;—and the entire burden of their speeches, addresses, resolutions and other proceedings is to urge his reelection upon party grounds.

This is adroit, and, under the circumstances, absolutely necessary. Unless Mr. WOOD can thus secure the cordial and hearty support of the entire Democratic Party, he has not the ghost of a chance of success. Shining as may be his personal virtues, in his own opinion, they have not so far dazzled the public eye as to secure for him the votes of anybody outside the limits of his political faction. Neither Americans nor Republicans,—nor any of that large portion of our people who seldom vote at all, will vote for Mr. WOOD in the coming contest. There will be a more perfect union of all other parties against him than has ever before been seen in any City election. It is fairly open to doubt whether this combined vote is not fully equal to the full strength of the Democratic Party;—but if that party breaks,—if any considerable number of its members refuse to vote for Mayor WOOD, his defeat is reasonably certain. And it is a conviction of this fact that leads his supporters to bend all their efforts to the single point of showing that this is a strictly party contest, and that it must be waged on party grounds.

With that portion of the Democratic Party which blindly follows, wherever it is led, this effort may succeed; but every intelligent, reflecting Democrat knows that it is delusive and desert. The political election of the season has just been held. Every party issue was then fully and fairly tried, and the Democrats of this City achieved a tremendous victory. Is it necessary to fight this battle over again within a month, in order to keep up the prestige of Democratic strength? Must the Democrats show a majority of 20,000 every thirty days, under peril of being considered the minority? Nothing can be more absurd. They have established their party supremacy in this City, firmly and undeniably; and there is no reason why they may not now give some little attention to their own affairs. The coming election has nothing whatever to do with political parties. There is not a single party question involved in it, or that can be affected by its result. The Slavery question has nothing to do with it: the management of State affairs has no connection with it: nor can the issue of it in the slightest degree affect the laws of last Winter concerning City affairs, except, indeed, that the reelection of Mayor WOOD will do more than anything else to prevent any alteration or amendment of those obnoxious laws. The election is purely a City affair. It concerns exclusively City interests. It relates wholly to the administration of City laws—the protection of life and property in the City—the preservation of the City health—the diminution of City expenses—the reduction of City taxation, and the redemption of the City character. These are the things that deserve attention; and no man who prizes the reputation of the City, or desires it to be well governed, will permit himself to be amused or deceived by these shifts and devices of partizanship.

But besides all this, Mayor WOOD is not the candidate of the Democratic Party of this City. He has secured, it is true, his nomination of a Party Convention;—but the ablest and most influential leaders of the party hold themselves aloof from it. They do not openly oppose his election. They know that there is no man in this State, or in the country, who has inflicted greater injury upon that party, by his attempts to make its welfare subservient to his own personal aggrandizement, than he. They know that his only object in seeking a reelection now is to establish his own personal domination over it, and secure the opportunity of making it still more completely the slave and the minister of his personal views. They know that nothing but his selfishness kept the members of the Old Police from being appointed on the New;—that in resisting by force the enforcement of the law, he placed himself and, so far as it sustains him in so doing, the Democratic Party, upon the very extreme of the "higher law" platform, for which the Abolitionists are so vehemently denounced; and that in his recent attempt to justify indiscriminate plunder and robbery, he has endeavored to throw upon the Democratic Party the brand of being the enemy of property, and the sworn foe of every man who is laboring to accumulate anything for himself or his children. No party can stand the odium of such doctrines and such practices as he has advanced, and no party that prizes its character and prospects will permit itself thus to be saddled with the responsibility of them, merely for the sake of ministering to the vanity and aiding the unprincipled ambition of any individual.

IMPRESSMENTS.—The Journal of Commerce says:

"It is a little more than a year since a number of our most eminent citizens (including some of the same who now certify to Mr. TIEMANN's honesty,) presented Mr. Wood with their assurance of the 'appreciation and gratitude which a generous and intelligent community always cherish for a faithful public officer.'"

Perhaps the Journal will be good enough to state the additional fact that quite recently Mayor WOOD has endeavored to assure them of the same "appreciation" of the same trust from the same persons—and that he found it quite impossible to do so. They were unwilling to indorse a second time. The experience and observation of a year has not been without its effect upon their minds.

Mayor Wood's Popularity.

There is a vague notion afloat in the public mind that FERNANDO WOOD is invincible. His supporters talk in mysterious tones about his prodigious strength and the certainty of his carrying everything before him, in spite of all opposition. Persons who have been impressed upon by this sort of talk will do well to look back to the record of votes cast when he was before a candidate authority. In 1855 the following was the vote for Mayor in this City:

HAVEMEYER (Whig)	[illegible]
BARNES (American)	[illegible]
HUNT (Reformer)	[illegible]
Total Opposition vote	[illegible]
FERNANDO WOOD	[illegible]
Majority against Wood	[illegible]
HIRAM SCRANTON for Governor	[illegible]
Wood behind the regular Democratic ticket	[illegible]

This certainly does not indicate any overwhelming personal or party strength on the part of Mr. FERNANDO WOOD. In 1856 he ran again, with the following result:

WOOD, (Democrat)	[illegible]
WESTON, (Republican)	[illegible]
LUNT, (Democrat)	[illegible]
WESTON, (Independent)	[illegible]
Total opposition vote	[illegible]
FERNANDO WOOD	[illegible]
Majority against Wood	[illegible]
JAMES BUCHANAN for President	[illegible]
Wood, behind the regular Democratic votes	[illegible]

The case in 1855 was very little stronger in his favor than in 1854. In both instances he ran from eight to ten thousand behind the Democratic ticket, and was elected solely and exclusively by the division in the ranks of his opponents.

These facts may be useful to those who would form an opinion as to the probable result of the pending contest.

Things Reported.

THE MAYORALTY.—It is reported that the "Straight-out Americans," opposed to Wood and Fusion, intend holding a meeting, on Wednesday evening, for the Mayoralty.—Journal of Commerce.

While the Journal is about it, suppose it notices sundry other "rumors" that are afloat in the community. It is reported, for example, that Mayor WOOD made repeated attempts to have an interview with Mr. CONSTANT in order to persuade him not to withdraw his name. It is reported that he was entirely unsuccessful. It is reported that he subsequently [illegible] a distinguished politician to make similar offers to Mr. CONSTANT on the same subject which offers were contemptuously rejected. It is reported that, since Mr. CONSTANT withdrew, Mayor WOOD has been very actively engaged in the attempt to procure the nomination of disorganized leaders of the American party to nominate another candidate; and that the Journal "reports" that he has succeeded in the endeavor. We hope he has—for he will find it the third candidate, and the third defeat; for this third candidate, we think, will be the strongest of the three. Perhaps, being posted upon the "reports" of the day, the Journal can tell us how much truth there is in this.

Obsequies of General Wolfe.

The 14th Regiment of National Guards of Brooklyn, about 150 in number, Captain STRONG, proceeded to Greenwood Cemetery, yesterday forenoon, and received in charge the remains of General WOLFE, which they conveyed to this City. At the foot of Whitehall-street they were met by Company F of the 71st Regiment, Captain TOMPKINS, consisting of 80 men, as an escort. The drum corps of the 71st Regiment, 18 in number, led the point of honor in the escort.

The cortège then proceeded up Broadway, the bands performing the death march. They arrived at the City Hall shortly before 3 o'clock; the coffin was taken from the hearse, and borne upon the shoulders of six men to the Governor's Room. The coffin had a profusion of silver mountings, and was draped in black with silver borders.

A massive and elegantly-engraved plate bore the inscription:

GEN. WM. J. WOLFE,
At San Antonio, Texas,
11th of May, 1840.
Aged 54.
U. S. A.

The cost of arms of the United States in silver was upon the lid, and below the inscription the [illegible] of Mexico in honor of which [illegible] the [illegible] Texas [illegible] the [illegible] Chippewas and Brownsville.

When the remains had been put in state, and many, as the doors were opened, had passed in to take a view of the corpse, [illegible] the Governors of New-York, Rhode-Island and New-Jersey, Major-General WOOL, and staff officers of the Regular Army, and Jersey Militia to assemble at Jersey City at 9 o'clock this morning, to participate in the ceremonies.

The occasion will doubtless be [illegible] at least large preparations have been made to make it so. Gov. KING and his staff arrived at the Revere House last night, where Gen. SANDFORD, of the 1st Brigade and his staff are also quartered—the guests of Gov. KING.

MRS. GEN. WOLFE.—Mrs. WOLFE, the widow of the distinguished Gen. WOLFE, promises to be in New-York on the 30th, to participate in the honors to her husband. The following letter has been received by the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. HASKIN:

SIR: Providence permitting, I will, with my family, be in New-York on the 30th day of November, the day appointed for paying the last honors to the memory of my husband. I have no suggestion to make in regard to the arrangements, fully assured that all my wishes will be anticipated by the friends who have thus far taken so deep an interest in the completion of [illegible] Yours, respectfully, [illegible] and Dr. Surgeon of Philadelphia, [illegible] Burlington, [illegible] Wolfe, [illegible] Mrs. Wolfe, [illegible] Mrs. at the Governor's [illegible] Street, New-York. I shall be [illegible] Mrs. Wolfe, [illegible] Mr. HASKIN, Chairman, Committee, Mr. HASKIN, Chairman, Committee, Mr. HASKIN, Chairman, Committee,

INTERESTING FROM WASHINGTON.

[illegible] Affairs—Minister to Costa Rica and Nicaragua—Sr Wm. Gore Ouseley.

The United States Naval Forces and Commanders—The Slave Ind and Frazier, &c., &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Hon. Mr. LAMAR, of Texas, some time since appointed Minister to Russia, after [illegible] to accept the mission to Costa Rica and Nicaragua, has left for home, probably, before Spring. The power of the latter of this mission will be similar to that of Mr. Wheeler, Gen. Cass's predecessor, being to secure a thorough and official settlement of all the Central American questions.

The Nicaran Gens Country has taken a house here, and will remain during the Winter advising with Lord Napier relative to these subjects, and on our general relations with England.

The President expresses much annoyance at the announcement of the arrival of the sloop-of-war Savannah, which was supposed to be guarding the San Juan River against the filibusters. If it proves that she has surrendered by order of Commodore Paulding, commanding the Home Squadron, the Commodore will be called upon for an explanation. There is now no United States vessel at San Juan, and if Walker's expedition leaks there, the public will not, many believe that the Savannah was withdrawn at by [illegible]

The distress transpiration from the Mediterranean squadron, is expected daily at Key West, where orders will send her to proceed immediately to San Juan.

It is said that the District Attorney of New-Orleans agreed to Walker's release here on a bail bd'l, by an arrangement with Stone, without consultation with the Judge. If the circumstances this to be true, the President declares that he will remove the District Attorney immediately.

Attorney General BLACK has examined the title of the Mobile school property proposed to be purchased by the Government for a Navy Yard, and also the transfer of the jurisdiction over it to the United States. Finding them perfectly satisfactory, there is no further obstacle to the purchase.

The gentleman who yesterday had an altercation with the President relative to the delayed decision of a claim, of which he is attorney, to-day addressed to Mr. William Walker, requesting permission and to repeat of his client as an excuse. He is also understood to have hastily concluded an apology or explanation from the Attorney-General for his conduct when he intervened between him and the President.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Senor Don Manuel Escalante and Senor Don Jose Marcoy were to-day introduced to the President by the Secretary of State, and delivered their credentials as Envoys Extraordinary and Ministers Plenipotentiary of the Republic of Costa Rica to the Government of the United States.

The state of the Governmental finances presents the only difficulty in the consummation of the New-York City Post-Office proposition. This, however, may probably soon be removed.

The Burning of the Steamboat Rainbow.—SEVENTY-FIVE PERSONS LOST.—A PARTIAL LIST OF THE VICTIMS.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Private dispatches, published this morning in the Commercial give some particulars of the burning of the steamboat Rainbow, when near Napoleon, Arkansas. At the time there were 257 passengers on board, including a large number of coal heavers on the deck. The wind was blowing a stiff gale when the fire was discovered, and the steamer was soon enveloped in flames. The boat was run ashore as soon as possible, and she there burned to the water's edge. The origin of the fire is attributed to an incendiary among the deck passengers. The total loss of life is estimated at seventy-five persons. All the officers were saved. The steamer Mondamin, from New-Orleans, brought those who were saved to Memphis. Among them are THOMAS MADDOCK, J. M. CARSON and JOHN MATTERSEY and wife, of Philadelphia. The boat's books having been destroyed, no list of the lost can be furnished.

CINCINNATI, Tuesday, Nov. 24—2 P. M.

The following-named persons are known to have been lost on the steamboat Rainbow, burned on the 21st instant:

JAMES LAUGHLIN and HIRAM CHARLESTON, Alliance, Ohio.

WM. CHAMBERS, Cincinnati.

JOHN GALLAGHER, Gallipolis, Ohio.

JAMES BURNAM, Allegheny City.

JAMES McLAUGHLIN, Pittsburg.

GEORGE GRAHAM, Birmingham, Pa.

JAMES MEHIFF, McKeesport, Pa.

THOS. NEWHOUSE and GEORGE NEWMAN, Carrollton, Kentucky.

A blind man named JOHNSON, and his wife and two daughters, Paducah, Ky.

Mrs. BOON, Memphis.

An Irish girl belonging to Carrollton, Indiana.

The Opelousas Collision—Lost and Saved.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The Southern mail, from all points, as late as due, has been received.

Among those saved from the wreck of the Opelousas, are G. W. BOWMAN, of New-York, and Captain HILL, of the Army. Fifty-four others were saved, together with the officers and crew of the boat. Among those known to be lost, are Gen. HAMILTON, of South Carolina, and A. J. VOORHIS, of New Jersey.

Effects of the Severe Weather.

NAVIGATION OF THE ERIE CANAL CLOSED.

BUFFALO, Tuesday, Nov. 24—1 P. M.

The thermometer at noon, to-day, marked 22° above zero. Snow commenced falling shortly after ten o'clock last night, and has continued, without cessation, ever since. A heavy wind is blowing from the west.

The canal is frozen over tight, and navigation at this end of it is suspended.

Our harbor is still open, but it is full of broken ice.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The weather here is moderate. Ice and snow slightly obstruct the Canal to the west of Rochester, but navigation is uninterrupted to that point. There is a probability that boats will get through to Buffalo for a week or ten days to come.

VESSELS DETAINED IN THE WELLAND CANAL.

OSWEGO, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

A large fleet of vessels, bound to this port, with cargoes of wheat, are detained by ice in the Welland Canal. Navigation of the eastward part of the Canal is uninterrupted.

The weather here is cold, and snow to the depth of two inches fell last night.

ST. CATHARINES, C. W., Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The following are the names of a few of the vessels frozen up in the Welland Canal: Schooners—Lively, Oneida Chief, L. J. Latham, Queen City, Mossy Hare, Lady Blossom, George Dousman, Star of Hope, Tiliton, Cayuga, Carlton, Heard, Jenny Lind, New York, Wellington, Harvest, St. Paul, Ocean Wave, Tarter, Lewis Wells, Charles Griswold and Cuba. Propellers—Jefferson, Bay State, Lady of the Lake and Cleveland. Many others are frozen in, whose names have not yet been received here.

The weather has set in very cold, and there is now no prospect of a resumption of navigation in the Canal this season.

NAVIGATION AT THE WEST—MARINE DISASTER.

DETROIT, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The propeller Ogdensburg, arrived here from Chicago late afternoon, reports that there is much ice in the Straits of Mackinaw, and that she experienced great difficulty in beating through it.

The schooner John Marsh, of Cleveland, is ashore near Presque Isle, and will be a total loss. Her crew were saved.

There is another schooner ashore [illegible] near the lighthouse, [illegible] Lake Superior, with all her crew.

The [illegible] account of the ice, the navigation is considered about closed.

WEATHER AT BUFFALO AND GREAT BARRINGTON.

BUFFALO, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

A heavy snow storm, accompanied with a very severe Northwest gale, commenced here this morning and continued through the day.

The canal is not yet closed, but unless the weather moderates there will be no further movement of vessels from here for the East.

SUNCOOKE, [illegible]

CHICAGO, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The schooners Col. Gibson, Belle City and Brewster are ashore near St. Joseph.

Collision of Steamship New-York and Schooner E. L. Fay.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The steamer New-York, from Boston, has arrived here and reports a collision in Vineyard Sound, on Sunday, between the steamer and the schooner E. L. Fay, hence for Boston. Both vessels were damaged. The schooner was towed into Holmes's Hole for repairs.

Boston Mayoralty Nomination Declined.—Election Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Hon. SAMUEL A. ELLIOTT declines the nomination for Mayor tendered him by the Citizens' Convention.

CHARLES H. HALL, Esq., cashier of the Nation Bank, was this evening nominated by the Citizens' Convention for Mayor.

Election in Dover, N. H.

DOVER, N. H., Tuesday, Nov. 24.

At our Municipal election yesterday the Republicans carried every Ward, and elected their candidate for Mayor by 100 majority.

The Nashville at Charleston.

CHARLESTON, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The United States Mail steamship Nashville, from New-York, arrived here this (Tuesday) morning at 7 o'clock.

The Case of Donnelly, the Murderer.

TAUNTON, N. S., Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Application has been made to the Chancellor for a writ of error, to carry the murderer DONNELLY's case before the Court of Errors and Appeals. The application was granted and a decision will be rendered in a few days.

The William-street Murder.

IMPORTANT WITNESS ARRESTED—UNSATISFACTORY STATEMENTS.

Information was received by the Coroner on Monday afternoon that a sailor, who boarded at a sailors' boarding-house, in Cherry street, had stated that he was in Mr. Vincent's place ten minutes before he was murdered, and could identify the murderers. Several officers of the Fourth Ward, accompanied by Officer SHANNON, of the Coroner's office, started, Monday night, in search of the sailor, and at a late hour the same night succeeded in finding him on board the Spanish bark Tresco, which was lying in the stream off the Battery, nearly ready for sea. They took him before Coroner CORNELL, at his residence, where he gave his name as JOHN BARSOUS. He denied having any knowledge of the murder of the murderers. He stated that he had never been into DANCOLL's dance-house in his life that he was aware of. He once went into a dance-house in Jamesstreet, and that was the only dance-house he ever visited.

Yesterday morning CHARLES BARNES and JOHN EDWARDS appeared before the Coroner and were examined touching the statement that had been made by the prisoner to them concerning his knowledge of the murder of Mr. VINCENT.

CHARLES BARNES, who was first sworn, stated that he was a clerk in the sailors' boarding house No. 29½ Cherry street, where BARSOUS recently boarded. After the murder of Mr. VINCENT, BARSOUS told him that he was in Mr. VINCENT's place ten minutes before the murder was committed, and could tell the murderers if he should see them. BARSOUS was slightly intoxicated at the time he made the statement. He made his present affidavit not from any vindictiveness against BARSOUS.

Mr. EDWARDS, proprietor of No. 29½ Cherry-street, declared that he did not hear BARSOUS make the statement imputed to him, but others had told him that they had heard him utter such a remark.

The boy, JOSEPH CHRETIOUT, was sent for, but could not identify the prisoner. He, however, stated that he was about the size of one of the men whom he saw in Mr. VINCENT's store on the night of the murder.

Mr. HILTON was also sent for, but he was unable to identify him.

The Coroner, in view of these statements, deems it proper to commit BARSOUS to await the result of the inquest. He was accordingly sent to the Tombs and locked up.

The Water-street Murder.

ALLEGED CONCEALMENT OF PARTIES IN THE SPANISH CONSUL'S HOUSE—A REWARD—MORE ARRESTS.

The inquest in the case of the murders in the Water-street dance-house, on Thursday morning last, was to have been resumed at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, at the Fourth Ward Station-house. The Coroner and Jury were promptly in attendance, together with quite a concourse of spectators. Coroner CORNELL asked Capt. WALLING if he had any witnesses to be examined, and stated that he had been told that one of his men was on the track of an important witness.

Captain WALLING—If one of my men had such information he would very likely go on and get the man.

Coroner CORNELL—Very well; you refuse to do it?

Captain WALLING—No, Sir, I did not refuse anything. I sent my man about the matter as soon as he heard of it, before I received your note. He went over to Brooklyn about it and did not get back until half-past eleven, and it appointed to-day.

Coroner CORNELL—Very well, Captain; we must work together, you know. I have sent a note to the Mayor, asking him to offer a reward in these cases. If the jury think proper to continue the inquisition, I have no objection, but when the reward is offered we might get more facts.

Captain WALLING—There are two men, as I have been informed, in the Spanish Consul's house that we have never seen. I went to the District-Attorney last night to get his advice about it, and could not find him.

Coroner CORNELL—You can see the men. I will give you an order to the Consul that these men must be seen. Tell him your business.

Capt. WALLING—I will see them, if I have to break the door down; I should make a request to go in, and go in any way.

Coroner CORNELL—I heard that you had arrested two men and had them here.

Capt. WALLING—That was in the William-street business, but we were deceived.

A JUROR—I suggest that inasmuch as there is a probability of there being parties at the Spanish Consul's house, we adjourn until Friday; we cannot bring in anything definite as the case stands now.

Coroner CORNELL—Oh, yes Sir, you can. My manuscript that goes into the District Attorney's office has it sworn positively there is a man who struck the deceased. It is sworn there, you know. I questioned him, you know, and he swore to it. We must go according to what we have written. The truth is, gentlemen, after this pieces out of your hands there will be no exertion about it. Perhaps after the reward is offered we may have an opportunity to at least go to work and conclude the one case on Friday and the other on Saturday morning. Mr. SEYMOUR, the counsel for the prisoners in the William-street case, says that the prisoners have been too long confined and he will take out a habeas corpus. I can't help it though we have done all we can for the calls of justice.

A JUROR—I have heard that it was published in the TIMES that the landlady had an interview with one of the prisoners at the Tombs.

Captain WALLING—The statement is correct. One of the girls said that one of the men was one of those in the house at the time of the murder, and the landlady checked her. The girl then said that the man looked like him. The first recognition was from the Corridor.

It was finally decided to adjourn the inquest until 3 o'clock P. M., Friday. Meantime, the police of the Fourth Ward are instructed to keep up an active search for the murderers. Yesterday afternoon two more of the gang of Spanish soldiers were arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the murder. They were confronted with Mr. DANCOLL and the girls of the dance-house, but neither being identified, they were discharged.

CLOSING THE SCHOOLS.—An impression has gone abroad that the exercises in our public schools would be suspended for the balance of the week, after to-day. An unsuccessful motion to that effect was made at the last meeting of the Board of Education. But the day and evening schools will be open on Friday, as usual. In Brooklyn it is otherwise, the vacate extends to next Monday morning.

Government of the Almshouse.

[illegible]

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of New-York:

GENTLEMEN: Your petitioner respectfully represents that he is a member of the Corporation of New-York, who met his intellectual energies nearly two years, and borrowed $2,000 from him, and has refused to pay him, since then, although he owed them $6,000 of his money (if they would count) the time being without further pecuniary business; that one of his creditors is the widow of George Steers, the renowned architect of ocean fabrication; from whom he borrowed a portion of the $2,000 he loaned the Corporation; that Mrs. Steers is near the close of her mortal career, which sorely grieves his heart, as he desired to restore her money before she died, and thus redeem his manifest pledge by honorable husband, and enable her to bequeath it to her three little children prior to her reunion with GEORGE in Heaven; that the Aldermen passed his claim by 17 to 3, which the Councilmen defeated by 27 to 1—31 votes being required to pass it; that he is poor, sick and friendless, and literally worn out, and implores admission to the Almshouse, where he will work as much as his health will permit, and will also give you the few dollars he can pay annum from some property his father left him in the form of a life estate; that on his trial and in support thereof he proves an immediate shock in the Penthouse, where he will not long be expensive to a public pauper, as his feeble pulse hourly warns him to prepare for a mournful journey to Potter's Field. Very sincerely,

STEPHEN H. BRANCH.

The Bonded Warehouses Broken Into Again—One of the Burglars Shot.

The Bonded Warehouses were broken into again last evening at about 11 o'clock. The police discovered that the front grating had been pried open; a close watch was kept, and an additional force sent for immediately. When that arrived the police entered the premises, and after considerable search, discovered that the sky-light had been broken open. Believing that the burglars had escaped into the adjoining houses from the roof the search was continued, and at one of them a desperate looking man, hailing from Boston, was discovered, and when the police attempted to arrest him he tried to escape. He was fired at, wounded severely in the jaw, and finally locked up for the night. On examination of the premises, upwards of 150 gold watches were found in a bag, ready for being carried away. From appearances the police judged that other thieves were secreted in the building, and at a late hour the search was still proceeding.

A Card.

The Five Points' House of Industry will hold as in former years, its annual Thanksgiving festival. A plain, substantial dinner will be provided for the inmates of the Institution, and the children connected with its Day School. The throng of thieving vagabond girls and boys, who have sometimes, by their importunities, obtained admission on these occasions, will be positively excluded, the officers of the Institution having become fully satisfied of the uselessness, to say the least, of feeding a class of children who come but once in the year, and then only for their meal, while their wants are so inadequate to provide for those who might be permanently benefited.

In appealing to our friends for assistance, we ask them to send us such things as can be made really useful. We want food of the plainest and most wholesome kind; shoes and stockings to protect the feet of our children; and clothing of the plainest kind to keep them warm. We want money to carry forward the work the coming Winter. Let the friends of the poor send or bring to their Thanksgiving offerings.

L. M. PEARL.

A MINISTERIAL CRISIS IN CANADA.—The Canadian Premier, Col. TACHE, has retired from office, rendering necessary a dissolution and reconstruction of the Cabinet. The Governor-General has commissioned Hon. JOHN A. MACDONALD to form a new Government. Col. TACHE's term of public service dates back to the last war. It is understood that failing health compels his retirement to private life. Simultaneously with the announcement of Colonel TACHE's retirement comes that of the resignation of Mr. LEMIEUX, in the Department of Public Work.

Mr. LASHING BORNELL, Milwaukee.

Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes:

DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in the store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved in my perfect satisfaction.

FIRST DIVISION, NEW-YORK STATE MILITIA.—Division Orders.—New-York, Nov. 17, 1857.—Since the issuing of the Divisional Orders of the 14th November, the Common Council of the City has made arrangements to remove the remains of Major-General WORTH, on that day, from Greenwood Cemetery to the Monument erected in his honor at the junction of Broadway and 25th-st.
The Parade and Review in commemoration of the day will take place at 11 o'clock, noon, the 25th, as directed in Division Orders of the 10th inst.
All Military Corps from other cities or villages desirous of participating in the ceremonies of the day, will report to the Division Inspector upon the Battery, at half o'clock A. M.
After passing the City Hall, the Division will form line in Broadway with the right on Battery-st., and will wheel into column with the left in front, as soon as the funeral procession is formed.
The line of march will be up Broadway to the Monument, from marching which the Division will form line on the west side of Broadway, until the Body with the civic procession has passed.
The 7th Regiment is detailed as a Guard of Honor for the occasion. Col. Vosburgh will detail a detachment to receive the Body at the City Hall, on Monday, 24th M., and is responsible for it until the procession is formed.
Col. Vosburgh will make his requisition upon the Commissary-General for three rounds of blank ammunition for his regiment.
The Major-General by request of the Committee of Arrangements of the Common Council, respectfully invites the officers of the Old Guard of the United States Army, to participate in the ceremonies to be performed by the Committee upon the removal of the remains to the Monument, to commence on the 25th of November inst., at the Governor's Room, in the City Hall at 11 o'clock, A. M.
The Major-General also invites the several Corps of Uniformed Militia Troops within a convenient distance of the City, desirous of participating in the funeral honors to be rendered on the occasion, to report themselves to the Division-Inspector of the First Division upon the Battery, at 10½ o'clock, A. M., precisely.
The Military Corps of Albany, Troy, and Hudson, the former at the request of the Adjutant-General Wetmore, are respectfully invited to attend.
All Officers of the Militia, not on duty, are invited to assist in the ceremonies, and will report at the Governor's Room, City Hall, at 11 o'clock, A. M.
By order of MAJ.-GENERAL SANDFORD,
R. C. WETMORE, Division Inspector.

AMERICAN GUARD.—SEVENTY-FIRST REGIMENT N. Y. S. MILITIA.—HEAD-QUARTERS, New-York, Oct. 16, 1857.
REGIMENTAL ORDER NO. 12.
In compliance with Division and Brigade Orders, the officers and members of this Regiment are hereby ordered to assemble in the Armory in full uniform, for parade, on Wednesday, the 25th inst.
The line will be formed in Broome-st., right on Broadway, at 9½ o'clock, A. M.
The Band and Field music will report to the Adjutant, at the Armory, at 9¼ o'clock.
The Music Committee are directed to have the drums covered with black crape, or thin black serge, by the 24th inst.
Quarter-Master Buckingham is directed to make requisition upon the Commissary-General for 1,200 rounds blank cartridges for the Regiment.
The Field and Staff will report to the Colonel at the Armory, at 9¼ o'clock.
Upon this occasion, the Committee of Arrangements of the Common Council, for the funeral obsequies of the late lamented and gallant Major-General Worth, whose remains are to be taken from the receiving vault at Greenwood Cemetery, and deposited in their last resting place, beneath the monument erected by the Common Council of this City, have, by a unanimous request, desired Major-General Sandford to detail the 71st as a "Guard of Honor," which having been acceded to, the Regiment, upon this occasion, will have the high and distinguished honor of guarding the last mortal remains of the hero to the tomb, where he will rest, surrounded by his fellow-countrymen, by whom he was loved so well.
By order of COL. A. S. VOSBURGH.
A. G. DEBARRIZ, Adjutant.

NOTICE.—THE JOINT SPECIAL COMMITTEE of the Common Council, on the subject of the Worth Monument, respectfully announce to the Public that on the 25th instant—on which occasion General Worth's remains will be interred—the procession will move from the Park at 12 M., and will proceed up Broadway to 14th-st., to 8th-av., up 8th-av. to 25th-st., the site for the erection of the Monument, in the following order, viz:
1. The military of this and other cities under the command of Major-General Sanford.
2. The officiating clergymen.
3. The pall-bearers and funeral car drawn by sixteen white horses, and the 71st regiment, Colonel Vosburgh, as guard of honor.
4. Horse of Gen. Worth, caparisoned and led.
5. The relatives and friends of the deceased.
6. The Mayor and Common Council and Corporation Officers.
7. The Mayor and Common Council and Corporation Officers of Brooklyn.
8. The Officers of the late War with Mexico, mounted, and First Regiment New-York Volunteers.
9. Soldiers of 1812.
10. The United States Officers, both military and civil.
11. The Society of Free and Accepted Masons.
12. The Cincinnati Society.
13. The Tammany Society.
14. The Firemen.
15. The Civic Societies and Citizens.
The solemnities to be observed at the monument will be as follows:
1. The receiving and depositing of relics in the box which is to be placed in the corner stone.
2. The oration to be delivered by his Honor the Mayor.
3. The religious ceremonies and benediction by Rev. Dr. Vinton. He is associated with Rev. Dr. VAN RENSSELAER, of Burlington, N. J., and Rev. Dr. SPRENG, of Philadelphia.
4. The dedication ceremony by the Masonic Fraternity.
The ceremonies will then conclude by the firing of three volleys by the 71st Regiment, Col. Vosburgh, "the Guard of Honor for the day."
The arrangements of the day will be under the command and direction of the Committee.
The Committee also respectfully make the following requests, viz.:
That the several persons having charge of the Church and fire-alarm bells in the City will cause the same to be tolled from the hour of 11 M. until the close of the ceremonies.
That the owners and masters of vessels in the harbor and the proprietors of the various public buildings in the City will display their colors at half-mast from 12 o'clock M. until the close of the ceremonies.
That our fellow-citizens will close their several places of business during the day.
That the owners and proprietors of public and private conveyances will cause their vehicles to be kept out of the following-named streets, which the various organizations will form in, viz.: Whitehall-st., Broadway and Parkrow.
The clergy and pall-bearers are requested to meet in the Council Chamber, at 11 A. M., on the day in question.
The relatives of the deceased are requested to meet at the Governor's Room, at 11 A. M.
The civic societies, firemen, &c., &c., are requested to form in Centre-st., the right resting on Chambers-st.
The citizens generally can have a fair opportunity of viewing the procession from the south side in front of the Hall, between the hours of 10 and 12 A. M., as the Committee have made suitable arrangements with the police to admit every person to pass around the car, and behold the scene.
All persons desiring to have relics placed in the box to be deposited in the corner-stone of the monument, can do so by delivering them to Alderman Blunt, No. 8 City Hall.

ILLINOIS STATE STOCKS.—THE SUBSCRIBERS offer for sale, at favorable rates, the following description of the securities of the State of Illinois:

$[illegible] per cent. Coupon Bonds, due in July, 1870. The principal and interest of these bonds will be paid in the City of New-York. The State allowing 1 per cent. premium on principal and interest. Thus the bonds representing, as they do, $1,000, are actually $1,009 of principal, and on which amount interest is paid.

ALSO,

Six per cent. New Interest Stock, issued for arrears of interest under law of 1857. Interest on this stock does not commence until Jan. 1, 1860, when they become principal stock, and are then entitled to the benefit of the tax provided by the Constitution for the liquidation of the Internal Improvement Debt of the State, thus insuring the payment of this stock in a few years after that date.

The above offers a rare chance to invest in a first-class security, the payment of which does not admit of a doubt, as the proceeds of taxes levied to liquidate the state debt, added to the receipts from railroads, which are applied to the same purpose, are more than sufficient to meet interest promptly, and to entirely extinguish the debt in about 10 years.

On July 1, 1857, the State owed $12,500,000. She cannot create any other debt, and is paying on account of principal over $1,000,000 per annum. Full particulars may be had on application to

Office of the Republic Fire Insurance Co., No. 191 Broadway, New-York, Jan. 5, 1857.

THE DEALERS WITH THE REPUBLIC Fire Insurance Company are respectfully notified that the Scrip for the years ending Dec. 31, 1854, 1855 and 1856, amounting to SEVENTY-FOUR AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. (74½) upon the earned premiums, is all ready for delivery. Interest dividends of SIX per cent. per annum on the SCRIP ISSUES OF 1854 AND 1855, have also been declared, and are payable in cash, at their office, No. 16 WALL-STREET, where insurers against fire are requested to call and examine the liberal character of their organization, which makes the insurers participators in the profits, without assuming any of the risks of the Company. Section 18 of the Charter provides that all Scrip not called for within six years from the date of issue, shall be passed to the credit of the Company.

THE MAYORALTY.

[illegible] right to govern itself. (Cheers, hisses and [illegible].) I state this simply to illustrate [illegible] that there should be no interference from [illegible] in the affairs of New-York by attempts [illegible] in the country centers. Fellow-[illegible] fellow-Democrats! look at the long line of [illegible] who have filled the office of Mayor of New-York—the Leverseeds, the [illegible] Havemeyers—(Cheers)—those under whom [illegible] City has advanced from an obscure vil-[illegible] to be, I may say, as the foremost metropolis on [illegible]. Under such administrations [illegible] advanced in power, in opulence [illegible]. Is it not time that we had [illegible]? We will obtain at least a re-[illegible] and have an episode of good gov-[illegible] by electing Daniel F. Tiemann for Mayor. [illegible] integrity and we [illegible] who has made sacrifices disgraceful in [illegible] in public life synonymous with [illegible] of Power! (Cheers.)

[illegible] Mr. Brown had taken his seat there [illegible] for Mr. Brown. Coming forward, [illegible]

Mr. Fry—Types of men who have found their [illegible] the journeys of the day, have discovered from [illegible] City hall last night, that party positions [illegible] Democrats! I say, that party positions [illegible] the only measure which [illegible] to see [illegible] of which party, but of a [illegible] party. I say, that the only measure [illegible] party, as the other. It is a [illegible] which your pre-[illegible] Tiemann, and the address [illegible] of the United States Government [illegible] Mr. Brown. It is to be regretted [illegible] distinguished [illegible] not only to the gentlemanly in-[illegible] Opposition, but to ten thousand [illegible] of the Metropolis, some of whom have [illegible] by word of mouth, some of whom have been [illegible] the Press, and many of whom are [illegible] this opposition upon every conveniente [illegible] and in the most public manner. [illegible] I do not a party man, with strong party feel-[illegible] habits and attitudes, ready upon all [illegible] to defend my party principles, and in a [illegible] manner to oppose those who resist them. [illegible] I am not so much of a partisan as to give up [illegible] party what was meant for mankind, nor so [illegible] a partisan as not to be ready and willing [illegible] with my fellow-citizens of all parties to save [illegible] Commonwealth and City from the monstrous [illegible] and outrage which now rest upon it. There [illegible] occasions when it is both patriotic and proper to [illegible] the extent of partisan warfare and to join [illegible] of those who think more of the common [illegible] and the common good than of party success. And this is one of those occasions. What bad men [illegible] good men should unite. We have just [illegible] from one strife involving local and State [illegible] of a party character, and each of us then fel-[illegible] the distinct party banner, as we shall again [illegible] State issues are involved. A year [illegible] there were earnest and fervor strife, we [illegible] in a contest to fill the highest office in the [illegible] of the people, but of a business and trade, in the [illegible] and in social life, we now meet as friends and [illegible], not knowing and not caring of each [illegible] political views. So, as friends and [illegible], men of labor and men of property, [illegible] of the workshop and men of the pro-[illegible] we ought to defend our homes, our [illegible], and, if we can do so, to restore the sullied [illegible] of our long-dishonored City. It was said of old [illegible] of old, if right often be said of us, that Cæsar had [illegible] and Cæsarism his party, but that the Ro-[illegible] had no name. We inaugurate to-night a new [illegible] and in our example shall that a [illegible] Man have a security as well as a [illegible] Roman? Gentlemen of the minority, I appeal to you, as minority men, [illegible] for a season all mere party preferences [illegible] to rid ourselves and the city, where [illegible] are, of the frightful miasma which [illegible] life and property in our midst. We [illegible] all personal aspirations, all honorable ambi-[illegible], all mere party issues to the public good, and [illegible] to inaugurate the reign of honesty and of honest [illegible]. I will not discuss the character of the man in [illegible] for public office further than to remark [illegible] the People's Candidate, Mr. Tiemann, all ad-[illegible] that we have an honest, pure, experienced, tried [illegible] who, rather than see anything has been or can be [illegible] said. Nor will I say more of the private character of his opponent than to remark that no pure [illegible] man can be indifferent to his own good name. [illegible] contented personal accusations resting upon [illegible] without some effort to lift the opprobrious [illegible] from his back. Private character, if worth [illegible], is of no much value to be thus assailed without some effort to vindicate one's good name by all the moral and legal means in this land, although rarely to vindicate and save the injured man. I choose rather to speak of the evils in our midst, and that I would not hide them if I could, for they bring shame and mortification to our City all over the land, and all over the world. We see them in the students which have become of almost daily occurrence; in the assassinations which are common as the night; in burglaries and robberies, in arsons and quarrels in general lawless-[illegible], and in the endless variety of those [illegible] which use the private stale.

And now let me speak which use the private stale.

The spectacle of the past month have been so disgraceful in the character of those composing the actors and in the elements which have been inaugurated. They have been revolutionary in purpose, sectarian in tendency, and intended to overawe the peaceable [illegible]. They have done that in America, which in one revolution in France destroyed law, property and life, and which buried a King beneath its ruins, and which in a more recent one gave utterance to the sentiment "that Property was robbery." Now, little indeed at variance is that sentiment, atrocious as it is, compared with the one promulgated by Mayor Wood, in his message to the Common Council of this City: "Take product everything get nothing, and those who produce nothing get everything." The Defender of Municipal Rights," as he is plaudered over our streets, calls upon the Municipal Government to purchase fifty thousand barrels of flour, and, at the Government expense, feed the poor. As if it was the business of the Government to support the people, and the business of a Mayor of the City—and yet who should be the father of the people—to feed and entertain, founded in the spirit of a demagogue, for the poor to call upon the Government to support them. It was the honest wish of Henry the Fourth of France that he might see a fowl in the pot of every peasant of his realm. It was the equally noble wish of a British sovereign that every subject of his kingdom might be educated to a competence; but what a contrast! the present Mayor, in his address, Mayor Wood, in his wicked attempt to excite the poor against the rich, while himself one of the wealthiest men of the City, and of course against class. How atrocious, too, the sentiment, and, if we can do so, to restore the sullied honor of our long-dishonored City. It was said of old Rome, or it might often be said of us, that Cæsar had his party, and Cæsarism his party, but that the Roman had no name. We inaugurate to-night a new [illegible], and in our example shall that a [illegible] Man have a security as well as a [illegible] Roman? Gentlemen of the minority, I appeal to you, as minority men, [illegible] for a season all mere party preferences [illegible] to rid ourselves and the city, where [illegible] are, of the frightful miasma which [illegible] life and property in our midst. We [illegible] all personal aspirations, all honorable ambi-[illegible], all mere party issues to the public good, and [illegible] to inaugurate the reign of honesty and of honest [illegible]. I will not discuss the character of the man in [illegible] for public office further than to remark [illegible] the People's Candidate, Mr. Tiemann, all ad-[illegible] that we have an honest, pure, experienced, tried [illegible] who, rather than see anything has been or can be [illegible] said. Nor will I say more of the private character of his opponent than to remark that no pure [illegible] man can be indifferent to his own good name. [illegible] contented personal accusations resting upon [illegible] without some effort to lift the opprobrious [illegible] from his back. Private character, if worth [illegible], is of no much value to be thus assailed without some effort to vindicate one's good name by all the moral and legal means in this land, although rarely to vindicate and save the injured man. I choose rather to speak of the evils in our midst, and that I would not hide them if I could, for they bring shame and mortification to our City all over the land, and all over the world. We see them in the students which have become of almost daily occurrence; in the assassinations which are common as the night; in burglaries and robberies, in arsons and quarrels in general lawlessness, and in the endless variety of those [illegible] which use the private stale.

And now let me speak which use the private stale.

The spectacle of the past month have been so disgraceful in the character of those composing the actors and in the elements which have been inaugurated. They have been revolutionary in purpose, sectarian in tendency, and intended to overawe the peaceable [illegible]. They have done that in America, which in one revolution in France destroyed law, property and life, and which buried a King beneath its ruins, and which in a more recent one gave utterance to the sentiment "that Property was robbery." Now, little indeed at variance is that sentiment, atrocious as it is, compared with the one promulgated by Mayor Wood, in his message to the Common Council of this City: "Take product everything get nothing, and those who produce nothing get everything." The Defender of Municipal Rights," as he is plaudered over our streets, calls upon the Municipal Government to purchase fifty thousand barrels of flour, and, at the Government expense, feed the poor. As if it was the business of the Government to support the people, and the business of a Mayor of the City—and yet who should be the father of the people—to feed and entertain, founded in the spirit of a demagogue, for the poor to call upon the Government to support them. It was the honest wish of Henry the Fourth of France that he might see a fowl in the pot of every peasant of his realm. It was the equally noble wish of a British sovereign that every subject of his kingdom might be educated to a competence; but what a contrast! the present Mayor
